Poultry Manure Management, Use Strategies Focus Of National Symposium

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

OCEAN CITY, Md. — It's a big challenge: how to move what some consider "waste" and others a valuable resource.

Poultry manure.

The problem: of the seven billion broilers produced in the U.S. every year, the manure generated could be laid down in a pile three feet wide by three feet high stretching 7,900 miles long, or about twice the length of the U.S.

Processing the manure so it could be used for fertilizer, fuel, or feed is the greatest challenge, but one that can be technologically met today, according to an agent with North Carolina Extension Service.

Glenn Carpenter, area agent with North Carolina extension in Pittsboro, N.C., said Monday that the technology to convert the resource is there, but is "not nearly as good as it needs to be for a long-term, sustained market of poultry goods," he said.

Carpenter spoke Monday

WOMELSDORF (Berks Co.) — Heinz ketchup, Idaho potatoes, and a trip to the grocery store proved to be more than simply food for thought for Margeaux Firestine.

Firestine, 15, combined several marketing ideas as she devised her own plan to market beef, the basis for her first-place speech at the Hereford Junior National Expo held in

World Dairy Expo Names Holstein Supreme Champion

MADISON, Wis. — A 4-year-old cow exhibited by Kent Van Dyk and Mark Rueth of Jefferson, Wis. was selected as the 2000 World Dairy Expo supreme champion here during closing ceremonies at the 34th annual show.

Vandyk-K Integrity Paradise is sired by Robthom Integrity and her dam is Vandyk-K Broker Pansey-ET. The supreme champion produced a 305-day record of 23,729 pounds of milk, 849 pounds of fat, and 780 pounds of protein.

The reserve supreme champion honors went to the champion from the Central National Jersey Show. Waymar Patrick Nadine is an aged cow owned by Piedmont Jerseys Inc. of Coaticook, Quebec, Canada. She has a 305-day record of 21,344 pounds of milk, 977 pounds of fat, and 838 pounds of protein. Nabdon Master Patrick sired Nadine and her dam is Waymar Silver Jay Norah.

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — Fall harvest season is almost complete as warm weather arrived early this week. The morning sun created an Indian Summer-like spectacle.

This has been a record year for corn production in the state and the country. The USDA notes that a record crop is in store for Pennsylvania — an average of 129 bushels per acre, up seven bushels per acre from the previous record of 120 bushels per acre in 1994. Corn production nationwide should be 10.2 billion bushels, the largest production and yield on record (average of 139.6 bushels per acre for the nation). Other farm reports indicate the corn harvest is coming in strong at regional feed mills. Rain has prevented harvest in some areas.

According to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, corn for grain production is forecast at 135.5 million bushels, 120 percent above last year's crop. The corn crop was 96 percent dent, 2 percent behind the 5-year average. The corn crop was also 78 percent mature, which was the same as the 5-year average. Twenty-two percent of the corn acreage was harvested by the end of the week, 8 percent behind the 5-year average. Corn silage harvest was very active and yields looked good. Fall plowing was 59 percent complete.

A sign of some rainy, cooler weather, not to mention shortening days, ahead . . . The photographer caught this glimpse of the rising sun Monday at the corner of Newport and Pond roads near Intercourse. Photo by Andy Andrews

THE ADVANTAGES OF ROASTED CORN

* Earlier Harvest - Our roaster will dry corn down eight to ten points of moisture.

* Higher Digestibility - Research studies show that roasted corn is more digestible than high-moisture corn.

* Purer Feed - Our wet growing season has the potential of producing mold spores in standing corn that is harmful to livestock, swine and poultry. Our flame roaster can effectively remove mold spores.

* Drier Total Ration - With less fermented feed. Supplementing the hay and corn silage diet with dry corn aids better rumin health.

* Greater Profits - Dairy herds fed roasted corn advance two to eight lb. per cow in milk and improves herd health.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
October 18, 2000
Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat and corn bids were mixed again today. Active harvest and wheat planting pushed bids lower while improved export interest and rainfall forecast for the south Plains limited declines. Soybean bids were higher again, supported by improved export interest. Wheat mostly 2 to 7 cents lower except Portland steady to 1 cent higher. Corn mixed. Sorghum 2 cents lower. Soybeans steady to 4 cents higher.

Indications that Taiwan bought 5.6 million bushels of spring, hard red winter, and white wheat for the US overnight, limited declines in wheat bids. Additional strength came from forecasts calling for rainfall in the southern Plains area over the next few days. Light profit taking was noted on the Boards.

Corn bids moved higher due to improved overnight export business. However, continued active harvest limited gains in corn and soybean bids. There were reports that South Korea bought Chinese corn for 2001 but this has not been confirmed. Small overnight bean sale to Taiwan was supportive along with firmer soybean meal trade.

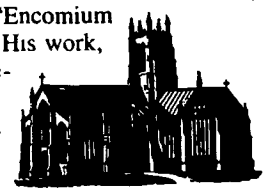
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

OCTOBER 23-29, 2000

DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME ENDS, 2:00 A.M., OCT. 29.

IN PRAISE OF FOLLY

October 28 is the probable birthday of Desiderius (for "beloved") Erasmus, the Dutch author and scholar born in Rotterdam in 1465. Some sources say it was 1466, but either way, he was considered one of the greatest of the Renaissance thinkers. Erasmas left many great writings, including his "Encomium Moriae" (In Praise of Folly). His work, "On Free Will" (1524), denounced Martin Luther's theory of predestination. With his sharp humor and wit, Erasmus worked from within the Roman Catholic Church for internal reforms, advising greater moderation and tolerance, and espousing humanism and its characteristic social reforms.



No one is injured save by himself.

–Erasmus

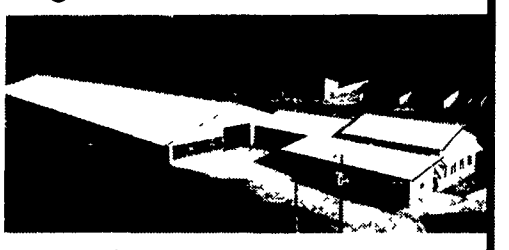
The Lease you need.



Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: As little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms from five to fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

OPINION

Biotech And The Silent Majority

In a recent poll released at the World Food Prize Awards in Des Moines, Iowa, more than two thirds of the Americans polled support the use of food and agricultural biotechnology as a tool to help solve world hunger.

According to the Alliance for Better Foods, of 1,000 adults surveyed, hunger and malnutrition are considered an urgent problem by 75 percent of American adults. That compares to 68 percent who believe disease and epidemics are urgent problems, 66 percent for pollution and environmental damage, and 43 percent for global warming.

By a margin of two to one, according to the Alliance (69 percent to 26 percent), Americans support biotechnology use in food and agriculture. About 71 percent believe biotech can help resolve problems of world hunger and malnutrition.

From the rice that is grown and fed to third-world countries with enough Vitamin A to prevent blindness in children . . . to fruit crops engineered to fight off deadly fungus, which can destroy them . . . to biotechnology to stop bugs from destroying a grower's bread-and-butter crops . . . the poll also found strong support for biotech.

The survey, conducted by KRC Research and Consulting, consisted of a random sample of 1,000 adults in the U.S., with interviews conducted from Sept. 15-18 this year. The full survey is available on the Website, www.betterfoods.org.

Other findings from the poll:

- 80 percent support using biotech to make foods more nutritious.
- 81 percent support using biotechnology to develop crops requiring fewer chemicals.
- 81 percent support using biotech to develop crops that need less land and water.
- 82 percent support using biotech to develop trees that grow faster.
- 75 percent support biotechnology to develop foods that stay fresh longer.
- 71 percent support biotech to develop foods containing natural vaccines.

"The response by Americans in (this) poll is heartening," said Dr. C.S. Prakash, director of the Center for Plant Biotechnology Research at Tuskegee University. "It affirms what most agricultural scientists and policymakers have been saying all along. Science and technology can continue to make a positive contribution in alleviating world hunger, and Americans overwhelmingly support initiatives to increase agricultural productivity and the use of biotechnology in addressing concerns of global food and nutritional security."

Science has proven biotechnology to a safe, assured way to benefit growers and those who benefit from it. The silent majority seems to approve of it, too.

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Plant Winter Cover Crop

Growing winter cover crops is a low-cost management tool which provides many benefits, according to Leon Ressler, Lancaster County extension agricultural agent.

One of the overlooked benefits is the contribution to soil organic matter levels. The root systems of small grain cover crops provide for a significant contribution of organic matter to the soil system.

Soil organic matter contributes to soil quality in a number of ways. As the organic matter decomposes, nutrients are released to the following crop. Well-decomposed organic matter becomes humus and this contributes to the ability of the soil to store important nutrients such as calcium, magnesium, and potassium.

Soil organic matter also contributes to the good physical condition of the soil needed for growing crops, known as soil tilth. As . soil organic matter breaks down, it produces sticky substances that help bind soil particles together in aggregates. These aggregates are important to promote soil drainage, aeration and improved water holding capacity.

To Use Cover Crops As Part Of Nutrient Management

Cover crops are a very important part of nutrient management, according to Leon Ressler, Lancaster County extension agricultural agent.

Many farmers need to empty their manure storage units during the fall season. This means these crop nutrients are applied to cropland at a time of year when they are not needed by a growing crop. Therefore these nutrients may be lost to the environment because of soil erosion and leaching.

Winter cover crops can help farmers prevent the economic loss of nutrients and reduce the environmental damage caused by movement of nutrients to the water supply.

If you are applying manure to cropland this fall, consider planting a small grain cover crop such as rye. The rye will take up the available nitrogen and hold it in the plant, preventing its loss to the water supply. If the rye is harvested, the nutrients will be utilized as high-quality feed. If the rye is killed or plowed down in the spring, the nutrients will become available to the following crop.

The rye will also prevent environmental damage by slowing soil erosion. Rye's extensive root system will improve soil tilth. Rye can be planted as late as November, but the earlier it is planted the more nutrients it will take up and the more it will produce in the spring.

To Understand Ear Fill

Incomplete ear fill is not necessarily a bad thing.

According to Dr. Joe Lauer, University of Wisconsin agronomy professor, you may expect about one inch of underdeveloped kernels at the ear tip when plant populations are at the proper level for optimizing grain yield.

If conditions are optimum early in the crop's development, a corn plant can produce about 600 to 1,000 ovules. Unfortunately, only 400 to 600 ever actually pollinate and develop into kernels.

Growers have a corn plant with the optimum number of ovules. It pollinates as many ovules as it can, resulting in more kernels produced than it has resources to fill. The plant adjusts by filling as many as it has resources for, and leaves the rest. Since the process starts at the stem and works out to the tip, an unfilled tip means the plant has given its all.

Deformed cobs or unfilled ears back much more than an inch may indicate real problems at silking or in ear development or too high plant populations.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "The currents that determine our dreams and shape our lives flow from the attitudes we nurture every day."

WHAT SHALL I DO?

Background Scripture:
2 Samuel 2 through 5; 1 Chronicles 11:1-3.

Devotional Reading:
Psalms 78:67-72.

During this past week, two different people came to me for counseling. Although they verbalized it somewhat differently, both said their greatest concern at this point is to determine what God wants them to do. I think that both of them already know what God wants of them and that they just wanted to try out their understanding with someone else.

We begin and process through life with goals — to start school, graduate from high school, get into college, graduate from college, find a job, wed a mate, and settle down to raise a family. We may also aspire to getting promoted in our business or achieve a certain financial status. But then somewhere along the line, we seem to run out of goals and we get to the point where we do not live for something; we just live. No longer seeking a goal, we begin to drift.

In the church we have the belief that people who want enter the Christian ministry must have a call of some kind. We had to be convinced that God was calling us and be able to convince others of that call. But we realize now that not only does God call people to the ordained ministry, but that he calls everyone to be and achieve something.

All Christians have a calling. So all of us need to ask God what he wants us to do

What Now, Lord?

"After this (the memorial for King Saul and Jonathan), David inquired of the Lord" (2:1). David did this because he believed that God had been guiding and directing his life from the day he sent Samuel to anoint him. So David was not asking God for his guidance for the first time. God told him to go to Hebron, beginning a long and convoluted path from King of Judah to King of all Israel. But the path was begun because David inquired of the Lord.

Shouldn't we all? The death of Saul did not make David king of all the tribes of Israel. First, it was only the people of Judah who anointed him. The other tribes looked to Saul's surviving son, Ishbosheth, as their monarch. It was only after years of fratricide and cruel warfare and the death of Abner, Ishbosheth's commanding general and power behind the throne, that at last all the tribes of Israel finally came to David at Hebron and said, "Behold, we are your bone and flesh. In times past, when Saul was king over us, it was you that led out and brought in Israel; 'You shall be shepherd of my people Israel'" (5:2).

What brought them around? Everyone must have been sick and tired of the unceasing warfare and bloodshed. Just as in Northern Ireland today people on both sides of the struggle are joining together to try to bring peace there, so there must have been Israelites and Judeans who at long last decided enough was enough. Besides, David continued to act in an exemplary manner.

They saw that he was the kind of ruler who could recognize and appreciate the efforts of even opponents. Told that the men of Jabesh-gilead had buried Saul and saved his body from further indignity, David sent a messenger to them: "May you be blessed by the Lord, because you showed this loyalty to Saul your Lord and buried him! . . . And I will do good to you because you have done this thing" (2:6). They were not his supporters, but he was not too proud to praise them.

Greater And Greater

As he became more powerful, David became an even more exemplary king.

"And David became greater and greater, for the Lord, the God of hosts, was with him" (2 Sam.5:10).

Many leaders have started out with the intention of being serving their followers, but as they gained more and more power, they became corrupted by that power. Historian Arnold Toynbee's schoolmaster had this motto emblazoned in Greek on the foot of his bed as a reminder. In English it read: "Rule (meaning power) will reveal the man." The way a person wields power shows what kind of person he is.

Another passage that tells us what kind of person David had become is 2 Sam. 5:12, "And David perceived that the Lord had established him king over Israel, and that he had exalted his kingdom for the sake of his people Israel." David acknowledged that it was God who had brought him to this state of power and that God had done so, not to exalt David, but the people of Israel. We are stewards of the power he gives us and we are expected to wield it for his purpose, not our own engrandizement.

Keep that in mind when you ask the Lord, "What shall I do?"

Milking Conference For Producers An NRAES Event

ITHACA, N.Y. — Quality milk, milk production per man-hour, and profitability can be optimized on dairy farms through careful management and capital investments.

New developments and research have occurred concerning milking parlors, milking systems, data collection and use, cow comfort, and cow handling to improve milk production. Producers considering expansion seek guidance on purchasing new milking systems and parlors as well as on effectively managing these systems.

On January 30 through February 1, at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel in Camp Hill, Pennsylvania. More than 30 experts on milking systems and parlors will share their knowledge and answer your questions at a conference entitled "Milking Systems and Parlors: Planning and Managing for Quality Milk and Profitability." The conference is coordinated by NRAES, the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service.

The conference will provide guidance on planning milking parlors, parlor efficiency, testing and trouble-shooting milking systems, system cleaning, data collection and management, workforce management, cow behavior, ventilation, and milk cooling.

The target audience includes producers, their advisers, milking managers, extension educators, service and supply industry representatives, milk plant field staff, veterinarians, sanitarians, engineers, and dairy scientists. Producers with 200 or more milking cows and those considering expansion will find this program of interest.

For the evening of January 30, a tabletop exhibit session/reception is planned, with hors d'oeuvres provided by industry sponsors. For the evening of January 31, four concurrent discussion sessions are planned on the topics of robotics, data collection and management, workforce management, and remodeling parlors for 50—200-cow dairies.

The conference is designed to allow plenty of time for audience questions and informal discussion. A post conference workshop for milking system technicians with intermediate to advanced skills is also being planned.

Conference speakers will include: Don Rogers, First Pioneer Farm Credit; David Reid, Rocky Ridge Veterinary Service; Steve Spencer, Penn State University; Steve Eicker, Valley Ag Software; G.M. (Jerry) Jones, Virginia Tech; Doug Reinemann, University of Wisconsin; Jack Rodenburg, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture, Food, and Rural Affairs; Andy Johnson, Total Herd Management Services; Steve Stewart and Paul Rapnicki, University of Minnesota; Curt Gooch, Cornell's PRO-DAIRY program; Richard Stup, Penn State's Dairy Alliance program; Edmond Pajor, Purdue University; speakers from leading manufacturers of milking equipment and parlors; and more.

The conference is being sponsored by various industry leaders and professional organizations.

The registration fee is $250 if postmarked by January 8, 2001, and $295 after January 8 or at the door. The fee includes one conference admission, the tabletop exhibit session/reception on January 30, one lunch, break refreshments, evening discussions, and a copy of the conference proceedings.

'Farm Fresh' Impresses Chefs

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

GAP (Lancaster Co.) — Recently a group of food industry representatives from Philadelphia came to see how area farmers take advantage of the abundant rainfall and fertile soil of the Lancaster area.

Approximately 20 tour participants included members of the "Chefs Collaborative," a chapter organized to establish a farmer-to-restaurant link.

The Philadelphia chapter is a one-year-old offshoot of the Chefs Collaborative, an organization begun in Seattle, Wash. in the early '90s. The Philadelphia group is particularly active, in part because of farmer interest.

On the producer end of the chain, a group of landowners from the Plain community have banded together to form the organization, "Farm Fresh for Chefs." The group, which includes 11 producers, markets meats, poultry, vegetables, fruit, herbs, and dairy products directly to restaurants, delivering the products once a week to Philadelphia. The products are all grown in Lancaster County and picked to order.

The farms involved in Farm Fresh for Chefs are certified organic with grass-fed animals.

Judy Faye, executive producer of the Book and the Cook, is excited about the "new relationship" between restaurants and Lancaster county producers. "It's a front-line outlet. Our restaurants are just, to use cooking jargon, ravenous for specialty products," said Faye.

She noted that Philadelphia has an abundance of quality restaurants, so owners are now looking for a competitive edge.

"Everybody's good, it's the kind of special experience they can bring to their patrons," she said. "Organic cheese and farm-fresh products are exactly what they want."

According to White Dog Cafe representative Debbie Eisenberg, one of the objectives of the day was to "Get chefs to be introduced to farmers, and see that it's not so hard to buy direct," said Eisenberg, who is also involved with the Chefs Collaborative. "The main goal of the chefs collaborative is to get chefs to buy direct and use sustainable agriculture."

Most of White Dog Cafe's eggs, chicken, cheese, and milk comes from the Farm Fresh for Chef organizations' weekly delivery. The establishment advises their patrons of the origin of the food with a notice printed at the foot of the menu.

"We also attach the farm name in the food description on the menu," said Cafe representative Tony Burnett.

"Customers ask where they can get it (Lancaster products), since they know they can eat it here but not at home," said Burnett. "They're learning that they don't have to go to the local supermarket and buy something shipped out of California. You feel good when you know where it's coming from and it hasn't passed through 10,000 hands before it gets to you."

Burnett also noted that the food at the Cafe holds a taste advantage over foods from other sources.

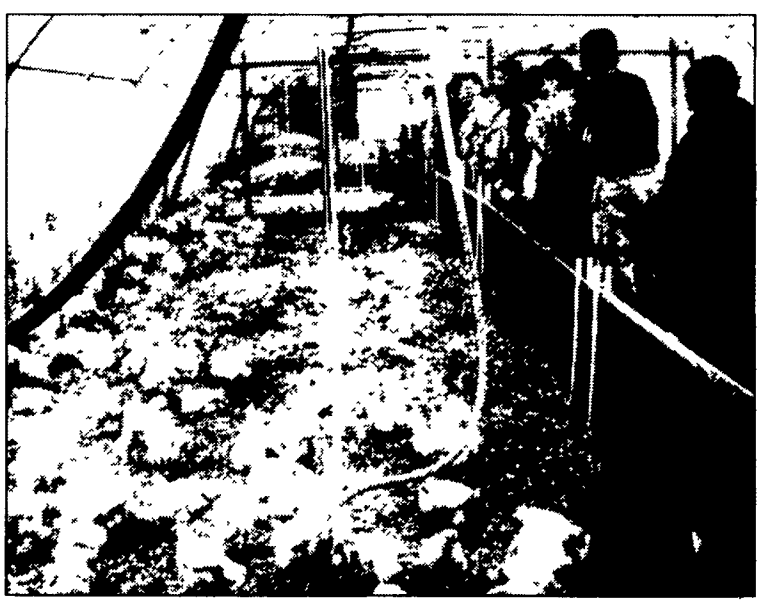
Said Eisenberg, "We serve a wide variety of things on the menu and we do these things using local farmer products, not products flown in. Chefs get introduced to different things since they get to talk to the farmers. It's a direct link."

According to Burnett, the connection is valuable to both producers and restaurant buyers. "Farmers try new things, which they introduce the chefs to," said Burnett, who noted that the link is also a means for direct feedback between the farmers and the chef on what customers like.

"The people who produce the food are a resource," said Joel Marucheck from Phoebe's Bar-B-Q on South Street, Philadelphia. "They can teach us things like telling the buyers how to use the product, how things are grown, or the kind of growing season they're having."

Ruth Yaskin is a private chef who works for families on contract. "The market's constantly changing and growing," said Yaskin. "If chefs don't support who's growing their food in their own backyard, where are they going to turn to?"

"Lunch was a huge treat," said Joel Marucheck from Phoebe's Bar-B-Q, who enjoyed being "a bunch of city slickers in a new environment. The hospitality was incredible. There were some serious chefs in the group (from Philadelphia) who were just blown away." Phoebe's Bar-B-Q has bought Lancaster County products direct for five years.



During the winter months, Stoltzfus houses the ducks and Cornish Cross chickens in a greenhouse, another stop on the tour.

En route to the first tour stop, participants viewed the free-range chickens housed on Amos Lantz's entirely grass-based farm, along with the travel trailers where Lantz houses his laying hens. Lantz changes the trailer's location often, giving literal meaning to the term, "free range chickens."

Aaron E. Stoltzfus' Friendly Farm was the first stop of the tour. Friendly Farm is a certified organic operation that houses free range chicken and ducks. Stoltzfus has recently begun a custom chicken butchering operation and has updated his on-site processing facility.

Stoltzfus began his small poultry-processing operation approximately a year ago. During processing time Stoltzfus employs 4-5 other people to help.

The chickens are raised on grass in the summer. The chickens' location is changed periodically for proper sanitation and food balance. In the winter, Stoltzfus makes use of a greenhouse. The pipes keep the water supply suspended above the floor for the Cornish Cross Chickens.

At Stoltzfus' farm John Berry from Lehigh County's Cooperative Extension gave a brief summary of his recently-published "Farmer's Guide To Processing and Selling Meat or Poultry."

An extension marketing educator, Berry attempts to help farmers wade through meat inspection regulations and promote direct marketing by smaller farmers.

Berry noted that all meat and poultry must be processed under federal inspection, except farmers who process less than 20,000 birds per year. In this case, the government is still interested in sanitation and the way small businesses are established on family farms and will send officials at the outset of the operation.

Producers see urban sprawl differently, said Berry. "Some farmers see it as a curse, but I suggest they look at is as an opportunity when they have customers on their driveway, if I'm willing to switch my operation to take advantage of that," he said.

"If a farmer takes on some management skills, more money will stay inside the farm gate through direct marketing or roadside stands."

Although a nationwide standard for organic farm does not exist, an organic farm makes minimum use of pesticides, and only those pesticides approved by the organic research board and not used on a regular basis.

There are seven active organic-certifying agencies in Pennsylvania. There are no firm, across-the-board standards to define organic.

"That's why, at this stage in the game, if you're interested in organic you should go visit the farm itself," said Brendle, also a member of Farm Fresh for Chefs.

Many of the farms along the tour were grassland operations. One advantage of pasture is that the animals return to soil many of the nutrients they ingest, instead of harvesting and selling the nutrients in the hay, according to Brendle.

Alvin Stoltzfus' Spring Water Farm was another stop on the tour. Stoltzfus, also a member of Farm Fresh for Chefs, hosted a chicken barbecue for the group.

A former row crop operator, Stoltzfus now has a total pasture operation where he keeps chickens, hogs, and dairy cattle on grass. Stoltzfus sells milk to the National Dairy Products organization, which produces the "Natural by Nature" organic milk for retail stores.

Alvin Stoltzfus' herd is made up of Dutch Belted cows, similar in appearance to the Oreo-cookie-like, beef Belted Galloway cattle. A lowland grassland cattle, these animals are better adapted to the grassfed diet than more traditional breeds.

Dennis Tice, sales director of Natural Dairy Products, spoke about the nutritional value of grass-fed dairy.

Tice summarized the health benefits of grass fed dairy animals. Although results are not scientifically proven, grass fed products have shown promise in preliminary studies.

Restaurants, noted Tice, are a starting point for organic food, as demand will be created when customers eat it at a restaurant and want to have the same foods

(Turn to Page A28)

Tour participants watched Stoltzfus' brood sows, above, recline during the afternoon tour. The sows will soon have piglets join them in the huts. The feed and soil treatment determine if the animal is allowed to be deemed "organic." Medication or antibiotics also may disqualify an animal from the organic label. Outdoor production, according to Stoltzfus, cuts down on animal health problems. Below are Stoltzfus' feeder pigs.

at home.

The group also stopped at Roman Stoltzfoos' Spring Wood Farm.

Stoltzfoos, who has been farming for 18 years, operates a 100-cow dairy and turkeys as the mainstay of his farm, with chickens and hogs in addition. Stoltzfoos composts all his manure before it is taken to the field, which he describes as too rocky and hilly for crops but suited to grass.

"You need to have the right market, people who appreciate the food you produce," Stoltzfoos said of organic farming. "Farmers realize that there are people who are interested in the way food is produced."

'We're borrowing our farm from future generations," he said. "If we treat it right it will be here for the next generations."

Stoltzfoos is the winner of the 200 Sustainable Ag Leadership Award from the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA). Stoltzfoos' 200-acre farm, certified organic, is also grass-based and produces dairy products and turkeys.

The tour ended at Glenn Brendle's Green Meadow Farm, where Brendle grows greens, vegetables, and specialty herbs on a 15-acre farm. He has been farming organically for at least 18 years. Green Meadow Farm now lies under cover crops, including Canola, one of Brendle's favorite cover crops.

Ag Leader: Presidential Debates Should Involve More About Trade,Biotech

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

DES MOINES, Iowa — November's election may be the "most important in a generation to farmers and the families of rural America," said Dean Kleckner, Truth About Trade chairman.

Dean Kleckner, former president of the national American Farm Bureau Federation, spoke recently at the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau offices in Camp Hill.

Also former president of the state Farm Bureau in Iowa, Kleckner noted that, while watching the televised debates between candidates U.S. Vice President Al Gore and Texas Gov. George W. Bush the past several weeks, both skirted around heavy agricultural issues.

For some questions, "both did a reasonably good job of answering," said Kleckner. But the issues of opening trade with China and biotechnology and its impact on American farm production and food on the table were not talked about to any great degree.

In the end, Pennsylvania may prove to be a key state, with electoral votes still up for grabs. Pennsylvania joins Ohio and Michigan that could swing the outcome of the election.

Illinois could already be won by Gore, Kleckner noted.

Kleckner said that the campaign managers for both parties have agreed to keep the answers too simple. Both candidates are knowledgeable and Kleckner agrees that he would like to see more depth, and more articulation, about where both stand on the controversial issues.

Truth About Trade, based in Des Moines, Iowa, is a nonpartisan protrade group, conducting an issue advocacy project called Farm Vote 2000. Kleckner has traveled widely recently to promote the advocacy project to several states.

Truth About Trade includes about 300 members, including producers and agri-industry professionals from 35 states.

Farm Bureau Applauds Move To Curb Trade Sanctions

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The American Farm Bureau Federation hailed the action recently by a House-Senate conference committee to lift the embargo on food and medicine sales to Cuba, Iran, Libya, North Korea, and Sudan.

"This historic action is a welcome signal to American farmers and ranchers that our country will no longer use food as a weapon," said AFBF President Bob Stallman. "It makes sense from both a humanitarian and commercial standpoint."

According to the farm leader, the five nations included in the sanctions reform measure import over $6 billion worth of farm goods yearly, including wheat, rice, corn, soybeans, feed grains, vegetable oils, animal products and fruit and vegetables. "Unfortunately, because of sanctions, our competitors have been supplying these markets," he said.

Stallman said he is hopeful that U.S. farmers can capture sales in some of the previously off-limits markets. "We have had significant contacts with Cuban officials in the last year or so and we know they are eager to make substantial purchases of rice and other commodities," he said. "It made no sense to forego sales in our backyard. Instead of punishing the Cuban government, we just ended up punishing the Cuban people and our farmers."

Stallman said the sanctions reform breakthrough, which is contained in the 2001 agriculture spending bill, was the result of "dogged determination" by key members of Congress, including Reps. George Nethercutt (R-Wash.) and Jo Ann Emerson (R-Mo.) and Sens. John Ashcroft (R-Mo.), Byron Dorgan (D-N.D.) and Pat Roberts (R-Kan.).

The House and Senate are expected to vote on the conference committee report soon.

Election Year Brings Ag Leaders To Pa.

From left, Mike Brubaker, Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service; Mary Schantz; Sen. Noah Wenger; Commissioner of the Texas Commission of Agriculture Susan Combs; Director of Michigan Department of Agriculture Dan Wyant; Director of Illinois Department of Agriculture Joe Hampton; and Kansas Secretary of Agriculture Jamie Clover Adams were all on hand to speak of the importance of this election and the future of farming in America.

morning to about 270 registered producers, agents, and other agri-industry professionals at the National Poultry Waste Management Symposium at the Sheraton Fontainebleau Hotel in Ocean City, Md.

In one area of North Carolina, broiler complexes turn out much manure. To some, that's a problem. But 35 miles east or north, said Carpenter, "farmers are crying for poultry manure," he said. "It's a matter of getting it to them."

It can be economical, according to resource management experts, to transport manure 100-350 miles if used as fertilizer and 300 miles if used as a feed. But processors must alter the form into something landscapers or feed handlers can use.

Processors can pelletize the manure, chemically enhancing it for fertilizer. The manure can even be used in potting soil mixtures, can be fed to cattle, and can be used as soil additive or as fuel.

Making use of the resource, while a challenge now, could be a nonissue in 5-10 years, the way the conversion technology is progressing, according to the North Carolina agent. The problem, Carpenter noted, "will be solved and then we can move onto other things. The technology is there, we just have to find out what it is."

He mentioned several producers across the country that generate manure and sell directly to farmers who use it as a directly applied fertilizer. One, Herbrucks Eggs in Michigan, manages more than a million layers and has enough demand for manure that they could sell "ten times as much," Carpenter said. "There's a lot of demand for the use of the product on corn in western Michigan."

Sparboe, in Iowa, has a 10-year contract with a grain company to take the manure. Sparboe gets a premium for a manure with high phosphorous levels, because the farmland in some parts of Iowa needs it.

A hatchery in west central North Carolina ships poultry manure to landscapers in the Raleigh, N.C. region. About 50,000 tons of manure per year from the hatchery are shipped to landscapers and for other uses.

Other companies have been selling to large home improvement store chains for compost, potting soil, and mulch. Golf

Andy Rogowski with Daylay Egg Farm, West Mansfield, Ohio, center with white shirt, spoke at the symposium Monday. Daylay has about three million birds, including 2.6 million layers and 610 pullets on four farms. The farm direct-markets composted poultry manure as a soil additive.

State Grange Heads To Carlisle For Annual Session

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) - Antitrust legislation, generic drug substitutions, food handlers certification and a dairy price support program are a few of the 70 topics to be discussed at the upcoming Pennsylvania State Grange Session, Oct. 21-24 in Carlisle.

The 2000 session marks the 128th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

About 800 Grange members from around Pennsylvania will gather at the Clarion Hotel, formerly The Embers, for the state convention to examine resolutions and potentially develop new policies as voted on by the delegate body. The session is being hosted by the Grange members of the 34 Granges in Adams, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Juniata, Lancaster, Mifflin, Perry and York counties.

"The Grange is a grass-roots organization which gets its policies from the local Granges in the forms of resolutions," said Pennsylvania State Grange Master (president) Bill Steel. "Over the years the Grange has successfully lobbied for such issues as rural mail delivery, establishment of rural electric cooperative and fairer prices for farmers. More recently, the Grange has been instrumental in battling cumbersome federal regulations and created a pilot program for stray voltage on farms. All these policies started at a local Grange and were then passed to the state level."

Highlights of the five-day convention include the State of Agriculture Address from Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes Jr., which is tentatively scheduled for Monday afternoon, distribution of community service projects in the local area, and presentation of various departmental awards.

Awards to be presented Monday evening at the All-Granger banquet include: community service awards to the top three subordinate (local) and Pomona (county) Granges, the teacher of the year, police officer of the year, and firefighter of the year awards, and the Granger of the Year award, the highest honor bestowed upon an individual for service to the organization.

Youth members ages 15-35 and junior Grangers (ages 5-14) will take center stage Sunday as they compete in the public speaking and sign-a-song competitions beginning at 1:30 p.m. in the Grand Ballroom of the Clarion Hotel. The sign-a-song contest showcases the ability to utilize sign language to popular music and help raise awareness of deaf and hard of hearing issues. Deaf and hard of hearing awareness has been the state's Grange community service project since the mid 1960s.

PACD/SCC Joint Annual Conference Oct. 29-Nov. 1 In Valley Forge

VALLEY FORGE (Chester Co.) — This fall, historic Valley Forge will serve as the site for the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts (PACD) /State Conservation Commission (SCC) 53rd Joint Annual Conference, hosted by the Southeast Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts.

The conference, featuring the Second Annual Conservation Expo, will be anchored to the theme "A Reflection on the Past — Before a 21st Century Charge." Activities open Sunday, Oct. 29 and conclude Wednesday, Nov. 1.

Featured speakers during the conference include James M. Seif, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection, and Pulitzer Prize winning author, Thomas Hlyton. Seif will be the featured speaker at the SCC luncheon, Tuesday, Oct. 31. Hlyton, author of "Save Our Land, Save Our Towns: A Plan for Pennsylvania," will speak at an evening banquet, also Oct. 31.

The conference will offer conservation leaders and supporters an excellent opportunity to strengthen their networking connections and their knowledge of conservation issues. In addition, the Joint Annual Conference will host several unique feature events, including a presentation/tour on deer management, a tour of urban best management practices sites, and the Conservation Expo.

This year's conference also places an increased emphasis on providing training opportunities. Workshop training sessions on stormwater management, watershed improvement projects, GIS, PennDOT's E&S Program, stream corridor restoration and leadership development, to name a few, will be offered during the event.

An estimated 60 exhibitors, representing an assortment of public and private organizations, will participate in the Conservation Expo. On Monday, Oct. 30, the event will be opened up to the general public. District managers from the host counties anticipate that a large number of municipal officials and watershed organizations will be in attendance.

Wetland and native plants for restoration, erosion control products, watershed restoration and improvements, financial services, pollution prevention on dirt and gravel roads, and nutrient management represent a sampling of the conservation products and services that will be made available by the various exhibitors.

During the first day of conference activities, Tim Smail of the Quality Deer Management Association will provide conference participants with a dynamite audio-visual presentation and on-site tour of Valley Forge Park. This event will provide information on quality deer management as a best management practice and land stewardship issue in Pennsylvania.

On Monday, Oct. 30, the PACD Auxiliary will take a guided tour of historic Valley Forge Park. On Tuesday, Oct. 31, they will tour Longwood Gardens and visit the Brandywine Museum.

Conference participants are invited to attend a tour of best management practices for stormwater management and erosion and sedimentation control, encouraged by the Southeast Conservation Districts. The tour follows the PACD Executive Council Session on the final day of conference activities. Participants will examine a supersilt fence, a skimmer, porous paving, storm basin retrofit and wetland treatment systems while touring three separate sites — a township building, a golf course, and a construction site on the campus of Villanova University.

The Year 2000 Conservation Expo is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection with support provided by The Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, The State Conservation Commission, and the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service. A special donation was provided by the Pennsylvania Local Government Investment Trust.

PACD members and conservation district directors will automatically be mailed an invitation to the joint annual conference. A complete program of events and registration forms are available on the PACD website www.pacd.org. Anyone requiring additional information may contact PACD at (717) 545-8878 or by e-mail at chuckrohrer@pacd.org.

Cowboy Humorist Ready To Bring Smiles To Chamber Ag Banquet

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The author of "Cowboy Spirit" is ready to generate smiles among the attendees of the 24th Annual Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry's Agriculture-Industry Banquet here Tuesday, Nov. 21, at the Lancaster Host Resort.

Rick Haines, "Cowboy Spirit" author and the emcee for the Agriculture-Industry Banquet, has had a good amount of practice at bringing smiles to audiences.

According to Haines, Cowboy Spirit is a "Jeff Foxworthy look at ranching," including complete cartoon illustration. The book has been a hit, prompting the publication of a sequel, due out in mid-November. As Haines puts it, " 'Cowboy Spirit' is as politically incorrect as it comes and for people of all ages."

But Haines has also entertained audiences, particularly those audiences with an agricultural interest, as a farm broadcaster from Montana. Haines currently uses his multifaceted background in agriculture to guide the programming for the Northern Ag Network, a five-state, 320,000-square-mile network coverage area. As agriculture director, he oversees the production of 165 radio and 10 television programs each week. Haines is president of the National Association of Farm Broadcasters for the year 2000.

For Haines, humor plays an important role toward the success of agriculture. 'Even in the darkest times of agriculture, attitude is everything. Therefore, humor keeps you laughing; it keeps you on your toes. And a smile is the only thing that can never be repossessed."

As a proponent for agriculture and, in particular, agricultural land preservation, Haines believes it doesn't matter what a person's background is in relation to farming in order for agriculture to provide experience and successful commitment to the future. In order to relate the importance of farm land, industry needs to take its message regarding agriculture to the people not acquainted with it on a regular basis, whether it be through presentations, magazine articles, television, radio, or whatever mediums are at hand "to promote that farms do exist for a reason. That groceries don't come from the back of the store. That somebody worked very hard to produce that food."

Haines' roots remain deep in agriculture as a FFA alumni member and promoter of the ag industry through scholastic ag functions, judging contests, and regional ag events. As a proud supporter of FFA, Haines believes agriculture's future relies upon teaching and exciting generations to come about the importance of agriculture. However, the key is to include everyone from all backgrounds, not just those from an agricultural background.

"And FFA does that," said Haines. 'FFA expands horizons and allows understanding among members by providing exposure, leadership, communication, and competition."

Haines has acknowledged Bruce Vincent, the keynote speaker for the evening, as one of the most objective persons he has ever met. As fellow residents of Montana and supporters of land preservation, Haines and Vincent have crossed paths over the years.

Vincent, a Montana logger turned pro-business activist, will bring laughter, tears, experience, and solutions to Lancaster County. Vincent can relate his life to everyone's life, according to Haines. 'Vincent's message is a story of tribulation. A story of joy. A story that will tug at your heartstrings as he talks to each individual and provides great motivation for everybody. And it doesn't matter what you do for a living."

More than 750 people are expected to attend the banquet.

Banquet reception begins at 5 p.m. with dinner following at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are still available at $40 each or $400 for a table of 10. All proceeds support the agricultural services program at the Lancaster Chamber.

Penn State Report Analyzes Federal Milk Pricing Legislation

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Federal plans to phase out dairy price support programs may be premature and could harm the American dairy industry, states a recent report from researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

In "An Economic Analysis of Federal Order Reform: Implications for Pennsylvania and the Northeast," Ken Bailey, associate professor of dairy marketing and policy, and James Dunn, professor of agricultural economics, use economic forecasting models to analyze the implications of the USDA reforms of federal milk pricing. These reforms, instituted in January, take a national approach to pricing milk. The study also looked at the effects of ending the dairy price support program, a federal program that has provided stability to farm-gate milk prices since its inception in the 1950s.

Bailey says this study clearly shows that the new class prices in the final rule are much more dependent on the price of dairy commodities than the formulas used prior to order reform. Under the new system, there is a direct linkage between changes in cash market prices for cheese, butter, nonfat dry milk and whey, and component prices for butterfat, protein, and other solids.

These component prices in turn drive the prices for Class I (fluid), II (yogurt and ice cream), III (cheese), and IV (butter and nonfat dry) milk. This study shows that if the dairy price support program is eliminated, the wholesale price of nonfat dry milk will decline by more than 13 cents per pound annually. That, in turn, would lower all other class prices, and hence farm prices for milk.

"We analyzed federal policy at the national level, and then brought it down to the Northeast and specifically to Pennsylvania," Bailey said. "If they're going to change something in Washington, I want to show what it will do to Pennsylvania dairy farmers and their milk checks. Our study shows that, because of new formulas for milk pricing, farmers are more dependent on the price support program than we thought they were. For example, if we end the price support program and prices for nonfat dry milk fall, it drops all the other dairy product prices. That has a direct impact on Pennsylvania milk checks."

The price that farmers receive is an average of the prices of the four classes of milk. Every month, market administrators calculate this average for 11 regions of the country, and that becomes the basis for the farm price.

'Pricing is complicated because milk is a perishable product that is used for so many different things," Bailey explained. "That complexity did not go away with order reform. As economists, we developed a model to tell us what would happen with the changes implemented under federal order reform."

Federal milk price supports were implemented in the 1950s to stabilize milk and dairy prices. Under the original system, dairy producers paid a per-hundredweight (100 pounds of milk) assessment and received support when the market price dropped. But dairy farmers chafed under the assessments during the more prosperous 1990s, and began pushing for an end to the program.

Then in 1996, USDA started to overhaul the milk pricing system. Order reform took effect on Jan. 1, 2000.

"We never thought we would need the price support program for cheese," Bailey said. "But twice this year, the price of block cheese has fallen below the price guaranteed by the support program. As a result, the Class III price fell to a 20-year low. Our study shows that the new definition of the Class III price is about 20 to 56 cents less per hundredweight than the old one."

The USDA earlier this year held hearings on the Class III and IV prices. They can use this information as they decide whether or not to change the formula for Class III milk.

Bailey says the study shows lower Class III prices were offset by higher prices for Class I, II, and IV milk. "This is objective, credible information that we put out for dairy farmers' use when they talk to their dairy cooperatives or state legislators," Bailey said. "We're trying to make this report available to everyone, so that when Congress or the USDA is looking at changing the current system, the farmers have a report that shows what these changes mean to them."

Dairy producers and farmers can read the report at Bailey's Dairy Outlook Website at http://www.aers.psu.edu/dairyoutlook/.

Poultry Manure Strategies

courses use it regularly.

He pointed to companies that market the Black Hen or Black Kow composted manure in bags. Big T Feeds in West Virginia feed a four-state area with enhanced pellets.

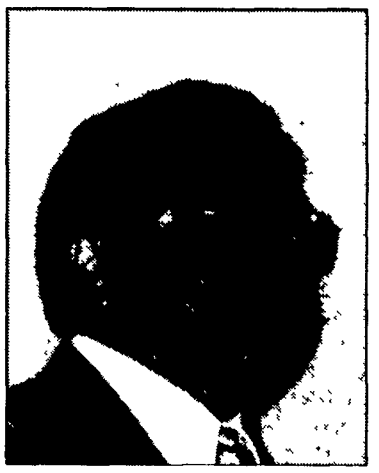
A Pennsylvania company even bags the composed manure for houseplant or container gardening.

Some concerns: quality control is an issue with the composted material. Its lack of uniformity; the need to add, in some cases, carbon sources; and lack of adequate chemical composition analysis have proved challenging. "No one knows what's really in the products," said Carpenter.

For many people, it's "much easier to make the product than to sell it." A market must be established before growers decide how to sell it.

Some growers use manure for electrical generation and cogeneration.

Many companies are becoming involved with technologies to convert the oversupply of manure into something useful, according to the ag agent.



Glenn Carpenter, area agent with North Carolina extension in Pittsboro, N.C., said Monday that the technology to convert poultry manure into a usable resource is there, but is "not nearly as good as it needs to be for a long-term, sustained market of poultry goods," he said.

"Things are finally starting to happen. We're not just 'talking' about it anymore," Carpenter said.

One such producer-marketer is Andy Rogowski with Daylay Egg Farm, West Mansfield, Ohio.

Daylay has about three million birds, including 2.6 million layers and 610 pullets on four farms.

Working closely with Ohio State University, Daylay has come up with ways to move manure as a product to help growers "build up" areas, he said, with low organic matter, low pH, and low soil nutrients in general.

There are several issues that the user must be aware of even when using such a product. Flies and beetles are issues, but the composted product in the Daylay system removes some of those challenges.

The product, in the end of the compost cycle is stable, uniform, and dry, and destroys weed seeds and pathogens, in addition to flies.

At one farm, Mad River Egg Farm, four buildings house one million layers. The composting is run on a four-day cycle with a "central design" system. Composting is done in a central building with a whisk aeration system. Air movement in the cages dries the moisture from 70- 75 percent to 50 percent in four days.

Conveyor belts also help dry the manure. An infloor aeration system adds air to keep the material as aerobic as possible.

Rogowski's recipe for 60-day composting:

- Make sure there is proper feed supplied to the birds.
- The manure spends four days on the belts.
- The manure is whisked to aid in drydown.
- Manure is conveyed to composting.
- Work is done to maintain manure porosity.
- Use forced aeration.
- Eighteen lanes turn the material every three days.

"We want the manure on belts so there is no compaction and it can get as much air as possible," said Rogowski.

The material can be applied to the land with any conventional spreader. They use a "floater" type spreader.

The benefits for the soil additive compost: it improves soil moisture-holding capacity, tilth, nutrient retention, and decreases soil erosion.

Rick Koelsch, ag engineer with the University of Nebraska, spoke about a national poultry waste curriculum program established which is under review for universities to adopt. It will be another year before the curriculum material will be available to universities.

Alex Avery, Center for Global Food Issues, Churchville, Va., spoke about the "war" by the unknowing public on "confinement livestock agriculture." Avery said the challenge will be to double the world's annual food output in the next 50 years to meet demand globally for a population that keeps expanding.

Only today's highly intensive, concentrated, family-owned production systems can do the job, according to Avery. He pointed out he has a homemade bumper sticker that reads "Produce more per acre, save more for nature."

Peter Groot Koerkamp, Institute for Agricultural and Environmental Engineering, Wageningen, The Netherlands, spoke about the farm "emission quotas" their countries are under. But technological systems put in place have quite effectively, he noted, reduced ammonia emissions.

Preston Keller, Tyson Foods, Springdale, Ark., spoke about the Tyson Environmental Awards Program which rewards good players for the environ-

The convention was under way Monday through Wednesday. Several tours, including a deep sea environmental assessment and fishing tour, in addition to a production and processing tour, were conducted.

Cheese Prices Collapse

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) - According to Arden Tewksbury, manager of the Progressive Agriculture Organization (Pro Ag), the value of cheese traded on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange on Tuesday, Oct. 10, dropped to the 1978 level.

The cash price for cheese in barrels was 99 cents per pound and the price for cheese in 40-pound blocks was $1.0550 per pound.

According to sources at Dairy Market News Service, these wholesale cheese prices are the lowest since 1978. Tewksbury said, "Pro Ag and other organizations are mounting a blitz on the United States Congress to take immediate action to shore up the falling milk prices to dairy farmers."

He said, "While the USDA uses the NASS survey to determine the value of manufactured dairy products (this survey starts all milk prices), the NASS survey usually follows the Chicago prices." With these dramatic declines in cheese and butter prices (butter traded at $1.1375 per pound), dairy farmers should be warned that dairy prices could by December dip below the lowest level of the year 2000.

Pro Ag is working with Congressman in several states to ward off the lower anticipated prices. Tewksbury said, "This is not a Republican or a Democrat issue. The issue is for Congress to protect the sovereignty of dairy farmers all across the United States."

Tewksbury said, "We are stressing the need for all dairy farmers and business people to contact members of Congress and urge them to support our efforts."

Pro Ag can be reached at 570-833-5776.

Groff Heads Lancaster County Poultry Association

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — "We've faced some big obstacles with salmonella, the avian influenza scare, and cholesterol," Nelson Groff said of the poultry industry. "Now the big challenge to sort out is animal welfare."

Groff is poised to take over the presidential reins of leadership for the Lancaster County Poultry Association at its annual banquet next Tuesday evening. Joining him in leadership are Jay Shannon of Keystone Farm Credit, vice president; Andy Bradford of Wenger Feeds, secretary; and Becky Petit of Hy-Line International, treasurer.

Groff works as the technical services representative for Heritage Poultry Management Services, Annville.

As head of the Poultry Association, Groff sees the importance of educating the non-farming public about agriculture. For this reason, he wants to explore additional opportunities with the Farm To City Day held annually at the North Museum.

The Farm To City Day began two years ago. The Poultry Association showed an informative video and sold poultry sausage sandwiches, chicken nuggets, and mustard and red beet eggs.

"This year, I'd like to give away mini omelets to promote the product and public relations with the non-ag community," Groff said.

"I believe we (the association) have already laid the ground work for many worthwhile projects," Groff said. "We have some members who are committed to overseeing these events, and it's a matter of them continuing their good work."

Groff said that the annual banquet held for Lancaster and surrounding county family living teachers has proven to be a success.

"For the past several years, we have had some outstanding poultry ambassadors and the newly appointed ambassador Rijelle Kraft is highly qualified, and I believe she will do an excellent job," Groff said.

The Ephrata Fair Booth is the Association's main fundraiser. "That has been a success mainly due to the dedication of Clair and Shirley High who have taken care of the annual event," Groff said. "Unfortunately they want to be relieved of the duties so we need someone to step in and take over."

Of benefit to producers is the organization's Poultry Day. Groff would like to see every producer attend in become involved in the association.

Although many animal rightists protest large poultry operations and a fringe cries for organic eggs, Groff does not see that becoming a mainstream demand.

"The fact is that farmers are working with small margins. The cost per dozen for organic eggs doubles the cost of commercial eggs, and I don't see the average consumer ready to pay those additional costs," Groff said.

"People need to realize that farmers do take care of their chickens. If you want to stay in business, you must take care of them," Groff said.

Groff is also concerned with over production of eggs in the midwest, which then dump their eggs in the east causing low prices.

Groff who has a ready laugh and easy-going management style, said that the poultry industry is a good fit for him, although it originally wasn't the career direction he had planned.

He said that his parents moved off the farm when he was six years old, but he worked on a farm from ages 13-19.

After high school graduation, Groff attended an electronic institute for one year until enlisting into the Army during the Vietnam War. During his three years in the Army, Groff worked in electronic communications, mostly stationed in Thailand.

When he returned to the county, the electronic job market was stagnant from all the electronically-trained veterans. Groff worked for Alcoa in machine setup. He soon married Arlene, and they will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary soon. Arlene's brother-in-law owns Melhorn Sales and Service and offered Groff a sales job with that company.

Groff loved selling chicks, but after 13 years of traveling from state to state he was ready to cut back on travel time.

About six years ago, Groff took a job with Heritage. In that position, he works with contract and independent flocks.

In the 19 years associated with some form of the poultry industry, Groff said that has seen lots of changes, especially many small farm disappearing and feed companies consolidating.

"We have less processors but bigger production," Groff said.

"We've faced some big obstacles with salmonella, the avian influenza scare, and cholesterol. Now the big challenge to sort out is animal welfare," Nelson Groff said of the poultry industry.

The annual Lancaster County Poultry Association banquet is planned for Tues., Oct. 24, at Willow Valley Convention Center. Tickets are available from board members or by calling Dr. John Schwartz, extension director, at (717) 394-6851.

Groff and his wife Arlene live in Manheim, where he has developed the six-acre plot surrounding their home into a personal paradise. He has planted a woodlot, installed a stocked bass pond, and cleared the land surrounding it.

"Hunting, fishing, boating, gardening — I like anything outdoors," Groff said. He was a former Cub Scout leader.

Arlene, a secretary for Melborn for 18 years, is working toward a degree at Harrisburg Area Community College (HACC). She enjoys crafts and decorating the home. The couple is active at Lititz Grace Brethren Church.

Because the couple works for two competing businesses, they say they share little about work-related details.

Although the Groffs have no children of their own, their nephew Kenny Sloat has lived with them since he was two years old. The Groffs talk of him with obvious love and pride as if he were their son. Now, 15, Kenny plays football for Manheim Central High School.

"This is a football town," Groff said of the team that continues to win championships for many years. The Groffs attend all games and have watched Kenny play since he started midget football at seven years.

Lawmakers Secure $1.1 Million For Plum Pox Research In Pa.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Senators Rick Santorum (R-PA) and Arlen Specter (R-PA) and Congressman William Goodling (R-PA/19) announced their successful attempt in securing $1.1 million for plum pox research in Pennsylvania.

The funding was approved by a House-Senate Conference Committee as part of the FY-2001 Agriculture Appropriations Bill.

The Agriculture Appropriations Bill must still be approved by the full Senate and House of Representatives before being sent to the President.

In Pennsylvania, the stone fruit industry is suffering from an outbreak of the plum pox virus, the first known case in North America. Santorum, Specter and Goodling, along with the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the National Peach Council, and other groups have been working to combat the virus, and this funding is crucial for this effort to continue.

"Since learning about the discovery of the plum pox virus in Pennsylvania, I have been committed to combating this devastating plague to our stone fruit industry," said Santorum. "I am please that the conference committee recognized the importance of funding to rid Pennsylvania of this harmful virus."

Specter said, "I'm delighted my colleagues saw fit to put these vital funds into the battle against this devastating disease, and to provide some relief for victimized farmers."

"There is no question this money is critical to help contain the spread of this disease which has wreaked havoc on Pennsylvania's fruit growers," said Goodling. "Along with these research funds, we must continue to push for fair and equitable compensation for our affected growers."

Kenny, center, has lived with his Uncle Nelson and Aunt Arlene Groff from age 2. One of the Groffs' favorite activities is watching Kenny play football for Manheim Central High School.

ASA Celebrates PNTR Signing For China Legislation

SAINT LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) recently applauded the signing by President Bill Clinton of legislation authorizing Permanent Normal Trade Relations (PNTR) between the U.S. and China.

Passage of PNTR for China has been a soybean industry legislative priority for more than two years. For U.S. soybean producers, PNTR for China is the cornerstone of trade relations that will facilitate exports of U.S. agricultural products to China.

"PNTR for China is the single most important piece of trade legislation that the ASA has backed in the last 10 years," said ASA President Tony Anderson, a soybean producer from Mount Sterling, Ohio. "ASA and our state affiliates mounted an all-out grass-roots policy campaign earlier this year that was instrumental in securing passage of PNTR in the House. We were extremely pleased that the Senate then provided strong support for this legislation, and that President Clinton has now signed the bill into law."

Passage of PNTR for China protects current U.S. soybean and soy product exports worth $1 billion, and makes possible future soy exports that could double in the next five to 10 years, according to industry estimates. Soybeans represented more than 7 percent of the total value of all U.S. exports to China in 1999.

Patrick Steel, associate administrator at the Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS) of USDA, said, "China is the largest growth market for U.S. soybeans and PNTR puts in place a system to preserve that growth market and opens the market for soybean oil and soybean meal. This is an important agreement for U.S. soybeans and is in the best interest of America."

U.S. soybean producers, who have been promoting their soybeans in China since ASA opened its Beijing office in 1982, were well positioned to supply product to China when economic and political changes made imports feasible. ASA opened a second office in Shanghai in 1993 to further expand market development activities for U.S. soybeans in China.

Speaking Of Beef, Have You Heard About CHB?

Tulsa, Okla., in July.

The speech was based on the topic, "Marketing Certified Hereford Beef," a topic dictated by contest sponsors, the "Poll-Ettes," who also run the national Hereford queen program and various contests at the Oklahoma competition.

Twenty contestants from across the U.S. participated in the competition.

Firestine's five-minute speech won at the state level before she moved on to the national competition, where her speech took her to the top of he junior division.

Pairing Up

Joint ventures were a focal point of her speech. The idea came from a trip to a Target store, where Firestine observed the pairing of name brands.

"I thought it would be good to incorporate a brand name everyone knows as a quality product with Certified Hereford Beef (CHB), so everyone associates Certified Hereford Beef with a quality product," said Firestine.

Consequently Firestine's visual aids included pictures of Heinz ketchup and Idaho baked potatoes with hamburgers and steaks with the heading, "Did you have your Certified Hereford Beef Hamburger with Heinz Ketchup?" to help illustrate how consumers would associate CHB with quality products

Firestine also pointed out that a good marketing plan would include a way to show the public the nutritional value of CHB. Additionally, Firestine mentioned that CHB could be included on menus of fast-food chains and upscale steakhouses.

Following the trend of today's lifestyle, Firestine suggested putting CHB on the market in the form of precooked, packaged roasts. Currently barbecue chicken, pre-made salad, and baked potatoes have cornered the market as a quick and easy meal available to time-pressed Americans, said Firestine.

"How can we best offer this convenience with CHB?" asked Firestine.

"I was shopping with my grandma, and every time she goes to the grocery store she buys precooked foods because she lives by herself," explained Firestine. She also conducted Internet research to determine the number of people who would prefer that type of fast and convenient food.

Firestine also touched on the importance of branded beef products in her speech. During the presentation she asked the audience to think of products and the brand names which instantly come to mind. Then she asked the audience to think about beef. "If you can't think of a brand, you are among the majority," said Firestine.

To help test Firestine's stage presence, the slide projector broke after she gave her speech at the women's breakfast, unknown to her. During her speech in front of the judges, then, Firestine discovered the problem and switched from a slide show to the overhead projector.

The livestock business is a family affair for the Firestines. Besides brainstorming and discussing speech ideas with her father, Mike, and practicing her presentation countless times with her mother ("She practiced at least two times a day," said her mother, Martene), Margeaux is joined by her sister, Morgan, 14, in her show ring ventures.

In addition to local fairs the sisters also show their Herefords in the New York and Maryland state fairs besides Keystone, Beef Expo, Farm Show, and Eastern national competitions.

To add variety to their show ring experience, the girls also show sheep and market pigs. During show season in the fall, the family is also kept busy with 20 acres of pumpkins which the family grows to sell wholesale.

Even though promoting beef and staying cool during presentations are strong points for Margeaux, she plans to head not into marketing but pediatric cardiology in the future.

A sophomore at Conrad Weiser High School, Firestine serves as secretary of the Pennsylvania Junior Hereford Association, besides being an active member of several organizations at school and church.

Hereford Experience Plus A Puzzling Presentation

Luke Vogel, the second place winner in the senior division of the speech competition, brought the experience of a lifetime on a Hereford farm to his presentation.

The son of Alvin and Donna Vogel, he grew up on the family farm in Butler County. The Vogel family owns 50 head of Hereford beef cattle besides sheep and horses.

Vogel was also an active 4-H participant and a student in the 1995 governor's school, an experience which he enjoyed and helped to draw him back to Penn State for college.

A dairy and animal science major and agriculture communications minor at Penn State, Vogel is looking into opportunities for employment in the beef industry, whether a cow/calf or feedlot operation or slaughterhouse.

His speech included a puzzle which he pieced together as he worked his way through the speech before coming up with the finish product of a Hereford steer.

Vogel's visuals also included graphs detailing tenderness,

Manheim Dairy Show Grows To Become Largest Show In Lancaster

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — From a handful of exhibited animals two years ago to almost 100 head this year, the Manheim Dairy Show, which almost closed, has grown to become the largest dairy show in Lancaster County this year.

"Two years ago, we had 20 cows and barely five exhibitors. The state fair fund matches premium money for five exhibitors and we only had four and almost lost it, but one exhibitor came at the last minute," said Ruby Bollinger, member of the Manheim Dairy Show Committee.

Show numbers also increased when the show was opened up to Lebanon County last year, which resulted in 56 head exhibited.

In addition to the broader pool of exhibitors and extra donated prizes from corporate sponsors, this year a milk auction helped to draw younger participants.

A symbolic gallon of milk from the supreme and reserve champion in the youth division is auctioned off, with 90 percent of the proceeds going to the exhibitor, said committee member Mike Kerdeman, Manheim. Two percent of the auction money goes to the farm show and eight percent goes to the dairy committee to pay for the painted crocks which accompany the milk.

Other community fairs also have a milk auction, said Kerdeman, who was enthusiastic about Manheim's auction. "We have really good supporters here in town," he said.

This year grand champion Dustin Horning received $750 for his gallon of milk from Manheim Auto Auction and reserve grand champion Crystal Brubaker sold her gallon for $425 to Jacob Ruhl Insurance, Manheim.

"It's been snowballing for us," said Michelle Wetzel, also a committee member, of the show's growing numbers. Wetzel points to word of mouth as the main source of advertisement. "The kids went back to Lebanon and told others about this show."

Two years ago the show had two exhibitors, last year the number rose to three, and this year 22 junior exhibitors brought their animals to Manheim.

The committee has also introduced corporate-sponsored classes that donated prizes toward class winners. Last year, 10 businesses sponsored the class, a number which rose to 29 classes this year. Area businesses donated blankets, chairs, and CD cases for the youth exhibitors.

"We also had special things," said Wetzel. "We (the dairy committee) had an ice cream social and birthday party for an exhibitor and this morning we had donated milk and chocolate milk and doughnuts for the exhibitors,"

"If you want to sum it all up, it's all everyone working together and helping each other out and lending a hand," said Wetzel, who cited examples of exhibitors in the same classes assisting each other.

"There's a lot of support from the community, a lot of people willing to donate time, money, and products," she said.

The outdoor show took advantage of the 75-degree fall day to showcase the animals. In the youth show, judge Elvin Hess looked for a true-type model of each breed. "I try to pick the one the closest fit to that model," said Hess, who selected Dustin Horning's Holstein out of the tough competition of the 3-year-old class.

"Turn Pike View Starbuck Penny," from Turn Pike View Farm, Stevens, took home the junior grand champion spot, followed by reserve grand champion Crystal Brubaker, Manheim, who showed a 2-year-old from Hilltop Heritage Farm.

"This is a pair of beautiful cows put together just the way you like to see them," said Hess.

In the morning's colored breeds show, James Findley owned the grand champion Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, and Milking Shorthorn. Andrew Dice had the grand champion Jersey. In the Holstein show, Lindsey Horning had the junior champion, followed by Dustin Horning with reserve junior champion.

Since each breed represented a difference in size, scale, appearance, and breed characteristics, Hess again looked for the closest fit to the best model of the breed for overall grand champion. To Hess, the Holsteins at the show followed true-type model the closest, as he picked Lowell and Deb Brubaker's animals for overall and reserve grand champion placings.

The Brubakers, who operate Hilltop Heritage Farm, brought 15 head to exhibit at the Manheim's dairy show. The family milks 150 head and crops 210 acres of corn and alfalfa. Their daughter, youth reserve champion winner Crystal, is joined by Heather, 19; Blake, 14; and Candice, 9. "The kids are the eighth generation," said father Lowell Brubaker.

"We enjoy doing fairs, they always have incentives for youth as far as premiums and gifts," said Brubaker. He said that he appreciates the efforts at motivating youth to stay involved in showing animals. The Brubaker family also shows at Elizabethtown fair and the Lancaster 4-H show, besides making an occasional appearance at the Farm Show.

Elvin Hess, retired dairy producer from Strasburg, judged the dairy show. Hess served for 30 years as a 4-H leader and has judged shows for 15 years, judging in every district show in the state of Pennsylvania. Following is a list of show placings:

Dustin Horning, Stevens, won junior grand champion honors. Crystal Brubaker, Hilltop Heritage Farm, took home reserve junior champion placing. In place of trophies, grand and reserve champion winners took home a sturdy duffel bag or a sweatshirt.

Judge Elvin Hess, Strasburg, picked Lowell and Deb Brubaker's Holstein as overall grand champion. The Brubakers, Manheim, milk 150 cows at their Hilltop Heritage Farm.

Representing Manheim Fair Dairy Committee is Mike Kerdeman, Michelle and Gene Wetzel, and Ruby Bollinger.

Andrew Dice, James Findley, and Lowell Brubaker lined up their breed champions to compete for the overall grand champion placing.

Heard About CHB?

palatability, juiciness, and flavor.

"I looked at Certified Hereford Beef for the new century and the improvements that could be made with CHB," said Vogel. Vogel "went out on a limb" with his new marketing ideas. He contacted both Certified Angus Beef and the Red Oak Farms feedlot, an operation with their own branded beef program named Premium Hereford Beef. From these sources Vogel gathered information about their product and marketing ideas already in place.

"I sat down and went through the information and looked at where the Certified Hereford Beef program is now, and thought about what Certified Hereford Beef needed to do to catch up with the competition," said Vogel, who then related these thoughts and concerns in his speech.

Key points included a plan to catch up with Certified Angus Beef.

"Certified Angus Beef is everywhere and has been around, but Certified Hereford Beef is hard to get," said Vogel. According to Vogel, more pounds of CHB need to be produced to increase availability. He also highlighted the advantages of moving the product to the East Coast markets.

Selling Itself

"The product should be able to sell itself," said Vogel. He pointed out that for the past two years, according to the American Tasting Institute, Hereford beef has been named the best-tasting supermarket beef and the best-tasting restaurant beef the past three years.

Vogel also used graphs to illustrate Colorado State University's comparison of Choice, CAB, and CHB. "Certified Hereford Beef excelled in juiciness, palatability, flavor, and tenderness," said Vogel.

During his speech Vogel included his ideas "for whatever we (Hereford breeders) need to do to get commercial cattle buyers to get involved in CHB," said Vogel. "Ear tags or brands symbolizing Certified Hereford Beef would track calves for the CHB program from the day they are born until they reach the slaughterhouse, where they are given a premium," said Vogel.

He believes this tagging and tracking would lead to increased numbers of Hereford beef participation, besides increased consumer appeal.

Vogel hopes to improve the market conditions in the sale ring for Hereford cattle.

"Today Hereford calves are not given the extra nickel because of the belief that Herefords don't marble," said Vogel. Taste tests, however, prove the opposite is true. Vogel hopes that his strategies will, however, work to "give Hereford calves equal footing," in comparison to cattle with black hides.

Dairy Expo Names

was the overall winner of the 2000 National Dairy Quality Awards (NDQA) program.

Brabant Farms is owned and operated by Joe, Paul, Steve, Phil, and Pat Van Lieshout, along with their father, Henry.

"We believe we have an obligation to provide clean and healthy milk for consumers. That's what they're paying us to do," said family spokesperson Joe Van Lieshout.

The Van Lieshouts milk 500 cows with a rolling herd average of 26,050 pounds of milk on three-time-a-day milking. Their herd's somatic cell count average, an estimate of mastitis level in the herd, averaged just 83,000 cells/ml. The herd averages just two cases of mastitis per month, outstanding in a herd of 500 cows.

NDQA, started in 1994, recognizes dairy producers and their families who do an outstanding job of producing high quality milk every day on U.S. dairy farms. The Van Lieshouts represent the very best of the U.S. industry, said Anne Saeman, executive director of the National Mastitis Council and NDQA manager.

NDQA is sponsored by the National Mastitis Council, World Dairy Expo, the National Milk Producers Federation, and Dairy Today magazine.

For more information about the NDQA program, contact Anne Seaman, National Mastitis Council, (608) 224-0622.

Hundreds of jars filled with seasonal fruits, vegetables, venison, chicken, beef, turkey, and baby food line the basement shelves of the Steagers' East Petersburg home. Lynette is always searching for new recipes. This year's collection includes nine varieties of pickles, watermelon rind, zucchini and tomato combo, carrots in a glaze, and numerous varieties of jams and jellies.

Canning Is This Young Mother's Hobby

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EAST PETERSBURG (Lancaster Co.) — Anyone who thinks canning food is a dying skill should meet Lynette Steager.

Wife of Todd Steager and mother of Jarrod, 2, and Meghan, 1, Lynette finds time for her favorite hobby — canning food.

"I'd rather can than bake or cook," Lynette said.

Her basement shelves are proof of her labors. Hundreds of jars filled with seasonal fruits, vegetables, hunting bounty, and meats line the shelves.

Lynette even cans baby food.

"The food comes right out of my garden so I can control what's in it (baby food)," Lynette said of the incentive to process her own baby food.

Jars filled with turkey, chicken, beef, and venison enable her to prepare quick, nutritious meals for her family.

"Canned meat is so tender and one of the easiest things to can," Lynette said, which makes canning a particular advantage for processing venison and other game.

Lynette shrugs off any admiration that canning is a demanding process.

"Anyone can do it if they have proper equipment," she said. "It's so easy to do."

One of the most essential items is a pressure canner. People unfamiliar with pressure canners often voice concerns that it might blow up their house or cause some other havoc.

According to Lynette, such fears are completely groundless. Pressure canners are completely safe and easy to use when instructions are followed.

She has attended several canning classes conducted at the Lancaster Extension office. Nancy Wiker, family living agent, teaches the classes. Lynette credits the classes with giving her lots of information in helping overcome canning failures. Lynette confesses that in a middle of a canning session she often calls the extension office for some SOS help.

For example, she recently canned tomato juice in some half-gallon jars she bought at a public sale. To her dismay, the jar lids did not seal. Wiker explained that half-gallon jars are no longer made because food usually spoils in that size jar. It is difficult to cook food to the proper temperature in that size jar, Wiker explained. According to food safety guidelines, the half gallon size jars are recommended only for canning grape juice.

Although people have canned food with boiling water bath methods in pass generations, Wiker said that the risk of botulism is more prevalent today. Produce is often purchased elsewhere rather than homegrown. In years past, people often got sick with food-borne illnesses but it was passed off as the flu.

"I say that pressure canners are like a car seat belt. Most of the time you don't need it, but you use it as a precaution in case you do," Wiker said.

Food that appears questionable should not be even tasted. "Botulism is deadly. When in doubt, throw it out," Wiker said.

A common mistake for beginner canners results in screwing bands on too tightly. This causes the lids to buckle.

Have pressure canner dials checked yearly. Lynette was surprised that her pressure canner dial was so off balance that she had been over-processing many foods.

Wiker recommends a "dry run" before each canning episode with a pressure canner. This entails filling the canner with water, covering it with a lid but without the pressure weight in place. Bring the water to a boil and exhaust the air 10 minutes. Place the weight on the canner and bring it to the pressure desired.

"This removes the air form the canner and prevents liquid from leaking out of the jars," Wiker

(Turn to Page B12)

Nancy Wiker, family living and consumer science agent, directs Lynette in proper canning procedures that prevent food-borne illnesses. Pressure canner gauges, Wiker said, need to be tested annually to assure temperature control.

WOODS

It just didn't feel right.

That familiar yellow handle of the barn "cleaner-shovel" just didn't feel right when I grabbed it one day last week. That shovel is our all-purpose barn-use one, hauled along through the milking process to clean and lightly dust with sawdust cow mat areas under each of the girls as we prep them for milking.

A closer look revealed the problem.

At some point, the shovel had been left somewhere it shouldn't have and gotten either stepped on by a cow or run over - perhaps - by the feed cart. Whatever the reason, a section of the handle showed rough, cracked paint, and slight cracks on the smooth wooden handle detected.

Time to do the Duct Tape Dash.

We have stashes of repair pieces and parts of stuff everywhere, here on the farm. The shop has a vast array of nuts and bolts, nails, belts, hoses, shear pins, etc. (except for the one you need). Plumbing parts and electrical stuff might be found around the dairy barn utility areas, along with a couple of boxes of spare and "make-do" first-aid supplies used to minister to ailing milking machines when they act up.

The bathroom closet shelters my own private household repair stash, with hammer, screw drivers, pliers. It's safest to store them behind a stack of towels or cleaning supplies, though, to guarantee they'll be there when needed.

But few repair supplies are as frequently sought after - at the barn or the house - as that in the Duct Tape Dash.

The silvery-gray sheen of duct tape has replaced baling wire/baling twine as the all-purpose, emergency, farm-aid repair material. And while the sturdy tape is perfect for wrapping battered tool handles for more strength - and covering those rough, splintery spots - it's valve goes way beyond that.

When a milker occasionally crashes to the barn floor and major parts separate - as happens occasionally- nothing is so quick and handy to tie components back together temporarily than duct tape. And when you need to keep the milking process moving to beat the race with the milk truck, that little stretch of duct tape can be a lifesaver.

Split hoses and cracked wiring on vehicles and equipment can sometimes be spliced together with awkwardly wrapped wads of duct tape, thick enough to temporarily hold in- or keep out - moisture. Ditto for piecing together cracked windows on tractors, pickups and equipment until they shatter and force a real replacement.

Duct tape makes one fine upholstery material. Now, granted, it has no colorful pattern or stylish texture, but the durability factor is hard to beat. It helps to contain the foam pushing through a crack in the pickup bench seat, to replace the chunk of foam missing from four-wheeler "saddle," strengthens several tractor seats worn from heavy use. While the shiny silver coating isn't a warm material for sitting on in cold weather, it's slipperiness allows you to just whip on and off the seats. Handy if you are doing the Duct Tape Dash for some other emergency.

Duct tape can be a life-saver for body-repairs. Not machinery, but people. I've seen finger injuries around the farm here which were temporarily first-aided with lengths of duct tape. Well, maybe it doesn't carry the American Medical Association seal of approval, but if it keeps blood in - and dirt out - isn't that the point? Speed records for the Duct Tape Dash may be shattered if there's much blood involved.

Less serious but equally handy is its use for foot injuries on cows, or cows with "ouchy" feet after trimming and in need of protective wrapping for a few days until healed. An artfully-applied bandage of duct tape forms a durable and inexpensive hoof "slipper."

From torn stretches of greenhouse plastic to loose storm windows, from rusty spots on old farm pickup fenders to broken pieces of toy farm equipment, we solve it with Duct Tape Dash.

Gee, if only we'd been smart enough years ago to dash to invest in some duct tape stock.

Going Hog Wild

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Communicating for Agriculture Scholarship and Education Foundation is awarding $10,000 in scholarships to those interested in participating in the 2001 International Pork Industry Internship.

The International Pork Industry Internship, developed by Dalum Agriculture College in Denmark and Communicating for Agriculture and the Self-Employed, Inc., in cooperation with the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, has developed a partnership that will provide skills and experiences valuable for a successful career in an export-driven pork industry.

The program, which begins January 8, 2001, includes a 8½ month practical training period on Danish pork producing farms, followed by a 12-week study period at Dalum College. Participants can complete the one-year program or a six-month practical training program. Room, board, and salary are provided to students.

Denmark, located in northern Europe, produces about 20 million pigs/year on a landmass about one-fifth the size of Nebraska. More than two-thirds of the total farm production is exported, making Denmark one of the USA's major competitors on the world market.

"This exchange will provide students a wonderful opportunity to learn about pork production and experience a foreign culture," said Milt Smedsrud, founder of CA. "The rewards of such an experience will last a lifetime."

Eligibility is based on the participant's knowledge of the pork industry and a strong desire to pursue a career in the industry. In addition, students must be 20 years of age and have completed at least one year of coursework at a community college or university before entering the program. It is also recommended that participants complete at least one course in economics before applying for the internship. Ten to 15 hours of college credit is available upon completion of the one-year program. Credits for the six-month program are to be decided.

Scholarship monies will be divided equally between all participants, with the amount not to exceed $1,000 per person.

Scholarship application deadline is Nov. 15.

For more information about the internship program or to request an application, please contact Beverly Gilmartin, CAEP Coordinator at 1-800-432-3276 x3510 or e-mail beverlyg@cainc.org.

Investigate Series I Savings Bonds

U.S. Savings Bonds are a familiar way to save income. But, do you know about Series I bonds?

I Bonds currently earn 7.49 percent interest and are government guaranteed and tax-deferred. The Treasury Department introduced the I Bond in September 1998 with a base or fixed rate updated every May and November. The base rate is currently 3.6 percent, good for the life of I Bonds bought between May 2, 1000 and October 31, 2000. This is its real rate of return, however, it's not the total amount you earn with an I Bond.

The "I" in I Bond stands for "inflation indexed." This means that its total return or interest is a combination of the real rate of return and an adjustment based on inflation for the previous six months. Your I Bond will always earn over and above the inflation rate. Until November 1, 2000, the total return on an I Bond is 7.49 percent when a new rate will be announced.

If you shop around, you will see this is a good rate of return. I bonds are absolutely a safe saving tool and you can start earning interest for as little as $50, the minimum I Bond denomination. Other denominations include $75, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000.

I Bonds are bought for full face value. You pay $50 for a $50 I Bond and it increases in value by earning interest. Series I bonds are unlike Series EE Savings Bonds which cost half their face value and grow to reach it.

Earnings from savings bonds are exempt from state and local income taxes and federal taxes are deferred until savings bonds are redeemed or for 30 years, which ever comes first.

Getting savings bonds including I Bonds is very easy. While many people buy them through automatic payroll deductions at their jobs, others don't have this option. The self-employed and employees of small businesses can now enter the Savings Bond EasySaver Plan. With EasySaver, you can buy bonds regularly with a debit from your checking or savings account.

This is a simple, no-cost way for you to save money; however, you must select the amount of money to set aside, when you want bonds issued and how the bonds are made out. You will automatically receive your savings bonds by mail on a regular basis.

If you bought Series EE savings bonds after 1989 or I Bonds, you, your spouse or a dependent may use them to pay for qualified higher education expenses.

Proceeds from U.S. Savings Bonds are exempt from state and local taxes but you must report them on federal tax forms. If you use the bonds to pay education expenses, federal income tax on earnings is deferred.

To take advantage of this benefit, follow these steps: 1. Both principal and interest from redeemed savings bonds are eligible for education expenses. If you use only 75 percent of the proceeds of the bonds, you only can exclude 75 percent of the interest you earned from the bonds you redeemed. 2. Married couples must file a joint return to get this exclusion. 3. If the eligible savings bonds were bought in a dependent's name for education expenses, bonds can be reissued in a parent's name. 4. A qualified taxpayer has to be 24 years or older before the bond's issue date.

If savings bonds reached final maturity they've stopped earning interest. It's estimated that Americans have tucked away approximately $6 billion in savings bonds that isn't working for them.

Savings bonds issued before March 1960 are not earning interest. Series E Bonds issued in November 1965 and earlier earn interest for 40 years. Bonds issued in December 1965 and after earn interest for 30 years. Series HH Bonds earn interest for 20 years. The date of issuance appears on the upper right-hand corner of the bond. Be sure you cash a bond on its issue date or six months thereafter when interest is again posted.

Many bondholders forget they hold bonds and often they're not included with other important financial papers. When you add this information to your assets, include the bond's issue date, value, series, owners and beneficiaries. If you can't find bonds you remember having, file a Lost Bond Claim Form available from most local banks, or from the Bureau of the Public Debt, Washington, DC 20239; or go to http://www.publicdebt.treas.gov/. For more information, check with your local bank or credit union.

If both husband and wife hold bonds, they should be retitled upon the death of a spouse and adding a new co-owner or beneficiary should be added, preventing the distribution being held up in probate upon the death of the second spouse. To make these changes, request a reissue form online at www.savingsbonds.gov.

Lastly, I Bonds are a great gift. They can be used to celebrate any occasion — special holidays such as December holidays, birthday, weddings, graduations or birth.

To learn more about I Bonds, go online at www.savingsbonds.gov or call 1-800-4US-BOND (1-800-487-2663). Buy bonds online direct from the government, http://www.easysaver.gov/ or (877) 811-7823. You can also write: Bureau of Public Debt, Savings Bonds, Parkersburg, WV 26106-1328. +

Pumpkins and their cousins, winter squash, are one of Pennsylvania's major vegetable crops. Pennsylvania growers produce more than 4,500 acres of pumpkins plus about 500 acres squash, making them the fourth largest vegetable crop in the state in terms of acreage.

Pumpkins come in all shapes and sizes. Many are used to create dramatic fall decorations, but the flesh may be stringy and have poor eating quality compared to eating varieties.

When selecting pumpkin to use for pies and cooking, most suitable are those known as winter squash such as neck pumpkins, butternut, and Hubbard varieties. These are good sources of vitamin A and fiber. They also help to fulfill USDA's recommended three to five servings of vegetables per day.

Pumpkin or squash can be cooked in a number of different ways. After splitting the pumpkin and removing the seeds and attached strings, the flesh can be cut out of the rind and cubed. The cubed flesh can be boiled, steamed, or microwaved until tender and then mashed.

An easier method to prepare pumpkin or squash is to cut it in half and place cut-side up in a shallow pan with a small amount of water or on a baking sheet, cover with foil and bake in hot oven until flesh is tender. The halves can also be covered with plastic wrap and cooked in a microwave oven until tender. The cooked flesh can be scooped out and mashed for use in recipes.

Here is a recipe from Land O' Lakes.

PUMPKIN WALNUT DATE PIE

1 cup firmly packed brown sugar, divided

Press evenly onto bottom and sides of 9-inch pie plate. Prick bottom several times with fork. Bake 5 minutes; remove from oven. Increase oven temperature to 375 degrees. In medium bowl, combine pumpkin, eggs, milk, remaining ⅔ cup sugar, cinnamon, and cloves. Stir in dates and walnuts; pour into prepared crust. Place pie on cookie sheet. Bake 45-50 minutes or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Cool completely. Serve topped with whipped cream.

Consumers Confused About Emerging Food Technologies

DES MOINES, Iowa — The American public remains in the dark about new food-enhancing technologies, a recent survey shows. CMF&Z Marketing Communications' eighth annual food safety survey reveals that most consumers surveyed were uncertain about several food-related terms that have surfaced in the last few years.

The survey measures consumer attitudes on a wide range of food safety issues. CMF&Z conducts the survey to assist its agriculture and food industry clients in identifying emerging issues and trends in food safety.

Consumers were asked to define several food-related terms, including "biotechnology," "irradiation," "functional foods" and "genetically modified organism." The survey revealed that most consumers were uncertain about the terms.

For example, almost 40 percent of respondents said they could not define "biotechnology." Seventeen percent defined it as "involving genetic alterations or engineering," and fewer than 10 percent correctly said it "involved an altered or enhanced product."

Scant Understanding of GMOs

Although more consumers were able to define "genetically modified organism" than they were able to define other terms tested in the study, only 29 percent of consumers responded correctly that GMOs have been subject to a change in DNA. Twenty-three percent couldn't define GMO at all, and nearly half offered definitions that were vague or incorrect.

Functional Foods Draw a Blank

Consumers appeared to be less knowledgeable about functional foods than any of the other terms. Virtually no respondent could correctly identify the term. A majority, 51 percent of those surveyed, did not know that a functional food is a food containing potential health benefits beyond the traditional nutrients they provide. Eleven percent responded that functional foods are foods necessary to survive. Other responses included "healthy food," "foods that are easy to make," and "foods in the basic food groups."

"This and other research tells us that consumers are largely unaware of advances in food technologies," said Dr. Thomas Hoban, Professor of Sociology and Food Science at North Carolina State University. "In fact, many modern consumers think their food comes from the grocery store or restaurant. They rarely think about how it gets there."

"The good news is that most consumers are actually quite positive about food technologies once they understand the benefits and are confident that the foods are safe," Hoban says. "It's imperative for food and agriculture industries, with the help of the media, to deliver clear and concise consumer information on new developments in food production and processing."

Irradiation Gaining Favor as Food Safety Tool

Consumer awareness of irradiation among respondents in this year's survey remains at about the same level as it was in 1999 (53 percent in 2000 compared to 54 percent last year). However, the percentage of consumers who see irradiation as a "very effective" food safety tool increased. Fifty-seven percent in 2000, compared with 47 percent in 1999, rated irradiation as a very effective tool for meat and poultry products. Fifty-two percent this year said the process is a very effective tool for produce, compared to 42 percent in 1999.

Twenty-one percent of consumers knew that irradiation involves using radiation to kill bacteria or other organisms, and eight percent said irradiation means to use radiation on food. Roughly two-thirds of those who are aware of irradiation also said they were at least "somewhat likely" to purchase irradiated foods.

Natural and Organic Foods Rated Safest

The survey also revealed that consumers believe natural and organic products are the safest types of food, ranking above food bought at grocery stores or at restaurants, functional foods and irradiated foods.

Sixty-nine percent of consumers surveyed responded that natural foods are "very safe," and 58 percent gave the same rating to organic foods. Only 33 percent gave this rating to food eaten at full-service restaurants, and 22 percent said irradiated foods are "very safe."

"The survey data suggest that consumers believe that the 'safest' foods are those which have been exposed to minimal processing and have had minimal exposure to chemicals — safer than the foods they buy every day in grocery stores or order at restaurants," said Bill Brewer, vice president of public relations at CMF&Z. "The agriculture and food industries have an opportunity to fill the information void and enhance consumer acceptance of emerging technologies. But agri-food communicators must move quickly and deliver messages that are easily understood."

The nationwide survey, conducted in May 2000, questioned 401 randomly selected consumers on a variety of food safety issues. The consumer survey has a margin of error of +/ 4.9 percentage points.

What Is Malted Milk Powder Made From

The malt that goes into your favorite smooth, milky ice cream treat is the same stuff that goes into another beverage - beer.

Malting is the process in which a seed of grain is allowed to start growing in a controlled process, then is dried and roasted.

While practically any cereal grain such as rye, wheat, rice or corn, can be used to make malt, barley by far is the most common. Raw barley starts out as a very hard seed that's full of starch and protein. Processors "fool" it into thinking it's going to grow into a plant by putting the grain in a tank with water to absorb moisture. This step is called "steeping."

As the seeds start to sprout, they enter the next stage of malt-making: germination. During this stage, the seeds make enzymes that break down the protein and also begin to break down the starch.

Processors stop the sprouting action by taking the sprouted seeds, or "green malt," and drying and roasting them in a kiln. The flavor and color of the end product depends mainly on how long the grain is roasted in the kiln, and how hot the kiln is allowed to get.

The flavor of some long-roasted malted grain is reminiscent of semi-sweet chocolate. Malt that's prepared for Scotch whiskey is dried over a fire with peat added to it - the smoke also affects the flavor.

The final steps in producing malt powder require mixing the malted grain with hot water (a step called mashing), converting the starch into sugars and extracting them from the grain. The resulting sweet liquid is called wort, which brewers ferment to make beer. It is spray dried to form a powder that we mistakenly call malt.

Dried wort is the powdery stuff we call malt. Add it to ice cream and you get a malted milk shake. Mix with powdered milk, and you get malted milk powder.

By far, most malted barley produced today is used to make beer and other fermented products, such as malt whiskey. Malted barley is also used as a source of starch in malt vinegar, certain breakfast cereals (such as Malt-O-Meal), malt syrup, barley malt flour, baby foods, candies and baked goods.

ANSWER — — Elam Lapp, Myerstown, wanted a recipe for making homemade hard cheese similar to farmers' cheese by using Jersey cow milk. According to numerous experts in cheese making, milk from goats, sheep, and all breeds of cows are interchangeable in cheese recipes. The end result may taste a bit different but milk from any source can be used in the recipes. Here is a recipe from E. Weaver. She writes that it is a basic recipe that can be adjusted to suit your taste. If the cheese is too soft, add only ¼ cup milk or sour cream to melted curds. Jersey milks works well for cheese. To get sour cream, skim cream off milk that has been clabbered before heating.

Hard Cheese

2 gallons milk, let set at room temperature until it clabbers to a junket-like texture (approximately 3 days).

Stir to break up curds using wooden spoon; then heat slowly on lowest setting, stirring occasionally. Heat to 120 degrees then pour through cheesecloth. Squeeze out whey until no more comes out. Put in dish and add ½ cup butter and ½ teaspoon baking soda. Crumble curds fine mixing well. Put in double boiler and melt. When melted, add 2 teaspoons salt and ½ cup hot milk. Stir until well mixed. Cool and slice.

ANSWER — Don Love wanted a cottage cheese recipe. Anne Wiegle writes that she tried many recipes with no success. Curdling it with rennet resulted in really tough curds. She got all sorts of weird looking molds growing in cheese she tried to ripen. The following recipes are proven, not from a book but from the way it worked for Anne under farmhouse conditions.

Cottage Cheese

Use raw milk. If you can't get raw milk, use skim milk, but it will take a lot longer to clabber.

Chill one gallon milk and skim off cream. If any cream is left in the milk, it will be washed away with the whey.

Let the skim milk sit at room temperature, covered, in an enameled or stainless steel pot, until it clabbers. This process should take overnight in the summer; longer in the winter. When the milk is clabbered, it should appear solid.

Cut the curd by running a long knife through it. Cut into squares of one-inch for large curd and half an inch for small curds. Cut lengthwise, crosswise, and horizontally as best you can.

Heat milk gradually to about 140 degrees. As it heats up, the curds will shrink and the whey will separate. Stir gently with a spoon occasionally as this happens. When the curds have formed, pour into a colander lined with several layers of cheesecloth. Catch the whey to use in cooking, if you want. Let the curds drain, and then rinse with cold water, using your hands to mix them. Do not run water through the curds this will break them up. Instead immerse the cheesecloth with curds in a large bowl of cold water and gently agitate to rinse off the whey.

The final rinse should be in salt water to salt the cheese. Prepare a gallon of brine in a large bowl. Lift the cheesecloth containing the curds and dunk into brine. Mix well with your hands to ensure the brine reaches all the curds. Then lift out the cheesecloth and curds and place back into the colander and let drain.

For creamed cottage cheese: Mix cream with the curds. Serve with apple butter. Delicious!

For Farmer Cheese: Press the curds into a cheesecloth lined mold with holes in the bottom. Place a board on the top and weight it. Let it press 24 hours while the excess moisture drains out. Unmold onto a plate.

For Feta-type cheese: (Real feta is made from sheep's milk but this tastes about the same): Gather curds into a piece of cheesecloth and form fist-sized balls. Squeeze out excess moisture. Let hang in cheesecloth for 24 hours; then tie up cheesecloth packages and preserve in the brine. Prepare brine with non-iodized salt. Make it strong enough that a potato will float half way down, not sinking and not floating. Bring to a boil and simmer 20 minutes to ensure that no bacteria is living. Cool and use to preserve the cheese balls. You can store this in a crock in a cool cellar, but Anne puts them in a plastic container and keeps in the refrigerator.

Dairy Farmer Efforts Lead Scientists To Endorse Dairy As A Healthy Food

ROSEMONT, IL — Generation after generation, moms have been telling kids to drink their milk to stay healthy. The world's leading nutrition scientists, dietitians and nutritionists agree. According to Dairy Management Inc.™, scientists are finding a positive relationship between dairy foods and cardiovascular health, and are sharing these findings with other scientists, health professionals and the public.

"This array of positive scientific research is incredibly significant," says Greg Miller, vice president nutrition research, for Dairy Management Inc.™. "Most mainstream nutrition scientists have moved from viewing dairy products as a dietary risk to cardiovascular health to a more enlightened view that dairy products are actually heart-healthy."

According to Dairy Management Inc.™, this scientific shift didn't happen overnight — nor by accident. "Since the early 1980s, the dairy farmer-funded checkoff program has invested several million dollars annually to reinforce, through sound science, how dairy products are an essential part of a healthy diet," says Miller.

Miller says that, at the time, pro-dairy research results were not readily accepted. "Ten years ago, few nutrition scientists would have supported the position that dairy products help reduce the risk of high blood pressure," he says. "We didn't have independent research to back it up."

Over time, however, independent research such as studies funded by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and other groups added to the mounting body of science validating dairy's important role in a healthy diet. The scientific community came to accept those findings supporting the health benefits of dairy foods.

"NIH now recommends that consumers follow the DASH (Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension) diet, which includes three servings of lowfat dairy products daily, along with ample amounts of fruits and vegetables," says Miller.

Dairy Management Inc.™ cautions, however, that scientific research, in and of itself, is not enough. "This wealth of scientific research confirming dairy's health benefits fails to reach consumers if they are unaware it exists," says Miller. "That's why Dairy Management Inc.™ and National Dairy Council® works together to get this science in the hands of health professionals such as doctors, nurses and dietitians, as well as consumers."

Somerset County Lamb And Wool Queen Conquers Shyness To Promote Industry

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

GLENCOE (Somerset Co.) — Deidra Smith, the Somerset County Lamb and Wool Queen, believes when you discover a weakness in yourself the only way to deal with it, is turn it into a strength.

That is how she is conquering the nerves of speaking in public and doing a 360-degree rotation from once being a bashful and shy child. Inheriting the responsibilities of her title pushed her toward changing. In 4-H state events, instead of an area where she was totally competent — sewing — she opted, instead, to compete in public speaking, forcing personal growth through an experience guaranteed to refine communication skills.

Backdropped by mountains, the Smiths' three acres are home for raising four Tennessee Walker horses, three breeding sheep, six head of Limousin cattle, and two goats.

Lambs became a delight to Smith when she was little more than a lambkin herself and cared for, while her mother worked parttime, by neighbors who raised the woolly creatures.

"It all started when our neighbors babysat me and had a small flock of sheep," said Smith. "I knew when I was real little that I wanted to join 4-H, and I had my first lamb when I was nine."

She recalls how little knowledge she had at the outset. "I showed up in shorts, T-shirt and tennis shoes," she recalled. "I realized after that you don't show up in shorts, T-shirt and tennis shoes. You want to show up looking your best and trying to look professional.'

Smith is the president of the White Oak 4-H club and corresponding secretary of 4-H County Council. Thoughtful friends who wanted to see young Smith succeed, after the initial painful experience, offered helpful tips and were encouraging, she said. The next time, Smith went into the show ring as a much more confident youngster, she was decked out in leather shoes, jeans, and a button shirt tucked in.

"I really grew in the knowledge of lambs and learned how to pick a market lamb and judge its value as a market animal." Smith said.

At 6:30 a.m., in the Northampton Township log house where she lives, Smith is preparing for classes at the Berlin-Brothersvalley High School where she is a junior. That early in the day she is spared having to tend the animals; however, she is responsible for evening feedings and exercising the livestock, thus giving her parents, Dwight and Gail Smith, a break.

"I don't worry about feeding animals in the morning, but when I get home at 3:45 I try to do homework and then spend time with the animals," said the composed young woman.

Depending on the movements of wildlife in the vicinity of their rustic home, a deer, even a black bear, might be spotted somewhere on the very scenic mountainside.

On three acres the Smith livestock is comprised of four Tennessee Walker horses, the three breeding sheep they are using to start their own flock, six head of Limousin cattle and two goats belonging to Smith's sister, Kelsie, a 7th grader.

A favorite family outing, the daughter says is an afternoon spent with dad, mom and her sister on a 10-mile ride with the horses.

"I am a very hard worker and set goals," Smith says about herself. "I like to associate with people who have a lot in common with me, although, not necessarily my views."

She is excited about participating in the Make It Yourself With Wool Pennsylvania Competition. Smith is a junior division entrant and anticipates meeting new people from around the state. The event is in the meeting rooms at Boscovs department store. Following the lunch break, contestants will model their fashions in a public fashion show on the Boscovs stage, the Galleria Mall in Johnstown, Cambria County.

Unlike making a public address, which puts butterflies in her stomach, Smith says she enjoys modeling. "Speaking in front of a crowd bothers me, but not modeling," she reports.

In addition to 4-H commitments, Smith considers lamb and wool promotions a priority over sports and other activities.

Smith wants to do whatever she can do to awaken public knowledge and awareness about the value and importance of lamb and wool products. She said that most people are ignorant that many small items they use everyday have been derived from sheep.

Lamb is tasty, if you purchase the tender cuts from a reliable grocer or trusted market or person who raises lambs, because the meat is very different tasting than mutton imported from other countries.

Smith recommends the following simple recipe that is one of her own favorites.

Deidra Smith, the Somerset County Lamb and Wool Queen, developed an affinity for lambs at an early age. Since then she has learned to pick a market lamb and judge its value as a market animal.

LAMB SPREAD

Saute one pound ground lamb until done.

Blend together with 12-ounces cream cheese and 2 tablespoons cocktail sauce.

Chill. Garnish with fresh dill weed or parsley.

Serve with crackers.

Somerset County Holds Farm Safety Day

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — When visitors to First-on-the-Scene for Farm Families was held Sept. 30 at Scheffel Equipment on the Red Goose Road, their attention to Bill Blough's presentation was rapt.

With Jim Harvey, Blough was targeting the issue of PTO Entanglement during the workshops held at different times.

That is because Blough, who got out of farming a few years ago, has a complete left arm but only a part of his right arm. Blough comfortably removed the prosthesis with its hook end that has enabled him to perform any task he wants to do and spoke about his own accident 32 years ago.

"When I pass this around, they look at this old stub and it makes an impression," he said, of the visible right appendage, explaining he has worn out six hooks and now possesses a new kind. It is constructed of plastic and stainless steel. Its designer guarantees it won't wear out.

Blough's experience found him caught in a manure spreader. He spent seven weeks in the hospital — ample time to meet a nurse named Jane. She obviously, was an angel of mercy because she became his bride in 1970.

"I married my nurse," Blough says, with a wide grin.

Ultimately, as Bloughs injuries mended and he adapted to wearing a prosthesis, he was able to farm about 500 acres and milk 110 cows, pick up bulky milk cans, and wield bales of hay with the hook.

New Centerville Rural Fire Company used dummies and farm machinery to demonstrate the steps of action in entanglement emergency.

The event began with Dorothy Bromley, director of the Somerset County Cooperative Extension, talking about a "Wake-up Call." This was followed by Scott Kovach from Somerset County 911 talking about reporting accidents.

Other workshops included: Farm Chemicals by Barry Blake and Doug Walker; Manure and Silo Safety by Jill Stull and Jay Shaffer; Machinery Entanglement by Jim Saylor and Jim Leer.

Additionally, Jessica Lynch covered Animal Safety; Larry Shober and Reed Miller from Somerset Rural Electric Cooperative demonstrated Electrical Safety; Smoke House, Kevin and Stacey; Hay and Tractor Rollover, Paul Treimeloni. Pennsylvania State Police also dealt with highway safety.

"Don't panic," is about the hardest thing to not do, but the most important thing to remember, when an accident happens whether chemical poisoning, entanglement or whatever.

Next, the person who is first on the scene must remember to not endanger himself, while aiding the person who originally sustained an injury.

Barry Blake said a person who panics will worsen the situation. "Don't let yourself get hurt. Don't become a victim yourself," he said.

Reactions can be from inhaling or ingesting or touching, depending on the type of chemical involved.

Jill Stull from Conemaugh Health Systems/Conemaugh Med-Star assisted by giving potential life-saving tips about dealing with accidents in manure lagoons.

"Very deep liquid will suck you in," she said, and warned that there can be a crust over the top and unidentified gases lurking below it. "You never know what is under it," Stull said.

Jay Shaffer talked about silos. He, himself was gased in 1990 while about midway to the top of a silo. He opted in a split second to go down rather than up, but, soon after was found unconscious still standing.

He said silos are a very economical way of storing feed but there needs to be a fan at the bottom to blow and rid the air of noxious gas. He highly recommends wearing a harness that allows the person to keep a voice activated head set with him. If there is trouble in the silo another person will immediately know about it.

More people are realizing, too, that cellular telephones or two-way communication devices are indispensable to farm families. These can help to save lives.

Stephanie Hartman, 16, a member of the Berlin-Brothersvalley FFA said she was convinced the first thing you do in an emergency is call 911.

"I came today and didn't realize all the stuff I didn't know. I learned you take care of the patient first, and that many little details are really important." She commented that depending on the location of the emergency, you have to ensure rescue teams will have an access to the area where the victim awaits help.

Besides that, she learned that a turnover emergency would require a different response from an emergency involving a manure pit. Knowing what to do first is critical.

"We are very much concerned about farm safety and want to help the farmers anyway we can," commented host Jonas Scheffel, the owner of Scheffel Equipment. "We enjoy our customers and don't want to lose them in accidents," he said.

Those who attended were rewarded with gorgeous fall weather and enjoyed the complimentary picnic style lunch on lawn chairs, the grass and picnic tables.

The event was coordinated by the Somerset County Cooperative Extension, Somerset County Farm Bureau, Conemaugh Health System, Penn State University with funding support from the PA Dept. of Agriculture.

Bill Blough had a farm accident 32 years ago. At Farm Safety Day in Somerset, he spoke from experience and showed how a prosthesis helps him do his work.

Lancaster Society 20

On Oct. 5, Lancaster Farm Women Society 20 met at the home of Marie Foose with Barbara Stone as co-hostess. Following refreshments, Barbara read Psalm 33 followed by several poems and the Lord's Prayer.

President Valaria Ferguson presided at the business meeting and gave several reports from state and county meetings that she had attended. Six ladies signed up to attend the county convention on Nov. 4, at the Farm and Home Center.

The nominating committee reported the following nominees have been selected: Nancy Lefever, president; Marie Foose, vice president; Anna Mary Groff, secretary; and Vera Herr, treasurer. Members voted and the nominees were elected to office.

After the dismissal song, members enjoyed the $68 food auction, which included cakes, pies, jellies, cookies, veggies, canned pickles and other items.

The November meeting will be with Pauline Reinhart and Dorothy Crawford as co-hostess.

York County Society 26

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

The last few weeks have been spent getting ready for winter. My husband has spent many days sawing wood and filling a shed with small logs for our son to burn. It is hard work, but it keeps him out of mischief.

He has also helped me to pick pole limas off of our 80-foot fence. They have given us bushels of beans this season. Last year due to the drought, I froze only two quarts of green beans, and we ate the rest. This year one long row gave enough to freeze 54 quart boxes.

Another job that I just completed was potting flower plants *from the garden. My daughter-*in-law gave me some of her pretty impatiens and I dug up some of my begonias. Now I still have the enormous job of digging baskets of gladiola, lily and dahlia bulbs. Most of my elephant ear plants will be left outside to freeze.

The other week we took a bus trip to Delaware to see "South Pacific" at the "Three Little Bakers." The bus was only half full, but the theater was filled. The food, which is plentiful, draws a lot of people, and the participation of the audience is also a draw.

This year we took a day off to visit a local fair. Usually we only attend the parade in the evening. At one time we went to see our daughter march in the parade. Now we go to see not only the bands, but also the big trucks, tractors, and marchers. Even the crowd that watches the parade is interesting to watch.

The variety of vegetable and fruits are very colorful, and the size of the pumpkins is fascinating. My own squash and pumpkins filled four bushel baskets this year and I was able to give half of them away.

Now I must finish canning the two baskets of quinces that Allen picked off of our tree on the hill behind our house.

Canning Is Hobby

While Jarrod, 2, and Meghan, 1, nap, Lynette delves into her favorite hobby — canning.

said of the need for the dry run.

People unfamiliar with canned meat often question the reason behind the process. Lynette explains that not only is the meat more tender and ready to use immediately, canned meat is also convenient when preparing many kinds of casseroles.

"When canning meat, never add liquid," Lynette stresses. "Meat forms its own liquid."

She adds salt to the meat before canning but does not recommend adding pepper and other spices because they float to the top. Pepper and spices also tend to intensify in flavoring when canned.

Lynette uses whole, boneless chicken and turkey breasts for canning poultry. She also has canned some boned chicken. She said, "It falls off the bone when you remove it from the jar, which makes it easy to use but I prefer using boneless."

Although some fruits are still considered safe to process with a boiling water bath method rather than a pressure canner, Lynette said that she prefers pressure canning just to be safe.

Growing up, Lynette retains fond memories of helping her mother, Linda Nolt, can food. Lynette now cans many items that her mother never tried. In addition, proper canning methods have changed to protect against botulism and other food safety concerns.

"But Mom often helps out," Lynette said. In fact, Lynette keeps her garden at her mother's Manheim farm.

One of Lynette's most memorable canning experiences happened last summer, when she canned seven baskets of peaches. The last batch of jars was finished processing at 10 p.m. At 2 a.m., Lynette had her first contraction, and by 4:30 a.m., the Steagers had a new baby daughter.

Jars of peaches filled the countertops and kitchen table. Lynette's mom came to her rescue and put everything back in order for the family's return from the hospital.

With two children under two, Lynette did not cut back on her canning projects this season. Organization is her key. She picks the produce in the morning and processes during her children's afternoon naptime.

During the winter months, one of Lynette's favorite things to do is read the "Blue Ball Canning Book" (available at county extension offices).

"I get ideas of things I haven't tried before, and make plans to try it," Lynette said.

This includes growing the items in her garden.

This past year for the first time, she canned zucchini and tomatoes together, carrots with a glaze, and taco sauce.

Also new this year were an Amish sweet pickle and a hot pickle, resulting in nine varieties of pickles for her.

After an extension workshop on canning pie fillings, Lynette did several successful batches of blueberry and apple pie fillings.

She cans many different varieties of jellies and jams for gift giving. Another favorite for gift giving is watermelon rind, which many older relatives appreciate because it is not available to purchase.

In addition to canning, Lynette has some other hobbies. She sews, plays the piano, and volunteers at the Lancaster County Prison, where she plays volleyball with women prisoners. She also volunteers at a local nursing home, where she plays the keyboard to entertain dementia patients.

In addition to the enjoyment of eating home-processed foods, Lynette gains lots of pleasure in rearranging the processed jars on the basement shelves.

"I feel so much satisfaction admiring all the jars," Lynette said of the full shelves.

Here are some recipes Lynette recommends. The recipes were distributed in a pressure canning meats and poultry workshop taught by Wiker.

Beef Stew
With Vegetables

4-5 pounds beef stew meat
1 tablespoon oil
3 quarts cubed, peeled potatoes
2 quarts sliced carrots
3 cups chopped celery
3 cups chopped onions
1½ tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon thyme
½ teaspoon pepper

Cut meat into 1½-inch cubes; brown in oil. Combine meat, vegetables, and seasonings; cover with boiling water. Bring stew to a boil. Ladle hot stew into hot jars, leaving 1-inch headspace. Remove air bubbles. Adjust two-piece caps. Process pints one hour, quarts one hour and 15 minutes, at 10 pounds pressure in a steam pressure canner. Yield: about 14 pints or 7 quarts.

Use a jar of this canned beef stew to prepare the following recipe.

Encrusted Beef Stew

1 quart jar beef stew with vegetables
2 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons cold water
¼ cup flour
1 tablespoon minced herbs, parsley, basil, thyme
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter
2 tablespoons heavy cream or milk

To make stew: Drain liquid from beef stew, reserving 1½ cups. Combine flour and cold water, stirring to dissolve. Add reserved liquid. Cook until thickened. Stir in beef stew, set aside.

To make crust: Combine flour, herbs, baking powder, and salt. Cut in butter. Stir in cream. Form into a ball. Roll to ¼-inch thickness. Cut into a shape one-inch larger than casserole dish. Cut vents in the center to allow steam to escape.

Place stew mixture into a one-quart casserole dish. Top with crust. Decorate as desired. Place casserole on a baking sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or until crust is golden brown. Cool 10 minutes on a wire rack. Serve warm. Serves 2-4.

Chicken A La King

2 (3½-4-pounds) stewing chicken, cut into pieces
2 stalks celery, quartered
1 onion, quartered
1 carrot, quartered
4 peppercorns
2 whole allspice
1 bay leaf
2 teaspoons salt
¼ cup chicken fat or butter
½ cup flour
5 cups chicken broth
¼ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped pimento
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Salt and pepper to taste

Combine chicken, celery stalks, onion, carrot, peppercorns, allspice, bay leaf, and salt in large saucepan. Cover with water. Bring to a boil; reduce heat; simmer 2 to 3 hours or until chicken is tender. Remove and discard vegetables. Allow chicken to cool in broth. Remove chicken. Skim off excess fat; strain broth. Remove skin and bones from meat. Cut meat into 1-inch pieces. Melt fat or butter; add flour, stirring until smooth. Gradually stir in chicken broth and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add chicken and remaining ingredients. Simmer 5 minutes. Pack hot meat and sauce into jars, leaving one-inch headspace. Remove air bubbles. Adjust two-piece caps. Process pints one hour and 5 minutes, quarts one hour and 15 minutes, at 10 pounds pressure in a steam-pressure canner. Yield: about 4 pints or 2 quarts.

To serve: Brown mushrooms in butter; add mushrooms to Chicken a la King, if desired. Heat until hot throughout.

To prepare, roll out pie crust. Cut into squares. Bake in 375-degree oven until slightly browned. Remove from oven. Place on serving dish and top with heated Chicken A La King.

Harvest In Apple Belt Yields A Festival

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

ARENDTSVILLE (Adams Co.) — Settled in a valley amidst the golden leaves, set to the tune of the sharp whistle of a steam engine and enveloped with the autumn scent of hot cider, the national Apple Harvest Festival conducted its 37th fall celebration at the South Mountain Fairgrounds.

With roads like "Red Delicious Drive," or "Stayman Stretch," several bands on the Cider Barrel or Appleseed Stage, puppet shows, talent shows, craftsmen demonstrations, free orchard tours, a pedal tractor pull, pie auction, steam engine rides, Apples the Clown, fresh food, and hundreds of handicrafts, the apple harvest festival was a popular destination every year during its two-weekend tenure.

In the Apple Auditorium, apple art and displays from nurseries, fruit markers, or juice- and applesauce-manufacturing companies lined the wall.

To complete their apple festival experience, participants had the opportunity to sample apple jelly, hot apple cider, apple fritters, apple butter, freshly-made applesauce or cider, and apple peanut brittle.

At one busy stand volunteers made applesauce to sell for the Jaycees, aided by peeling and coring machines donated by nearby apple-processing factories.

"I've helped for 25 years," said Vada Melhorn, Aspers. "I really love it."

The scarecrow-making stand turned out dozens of straw-stuffed men during the festival. According to Cheryl Hoover, Spring Grove, who worked at the stand, festival-goers have the option to either buy pre-made or make their own scarecrow. Participants chose jeans, overalls, flannel shirts, scarves, and hats from the bins.

"Kids love it, it's really a neat activity for them," said Hoover.

Jars of apple butter lined the counter of another stand. Jaycee members added spices and apple cider to prepackaged apple butter and heated the mixture to 160 degrees before repackaging and selling the finished product, according to chairman of this year's project, Mike Gwozdecki, Boiling Springs. Workers completed the process 3 times a day, yielding 72 jars each time. The apple butter, sweetened or unsweetened, was made and packaged by a local major orchard before the jars were sent to the stand to be spiced and sold at the festival.

Large, warm apple fritters warmed the hands and satisfied the sweet tooth. "Business was brisk, said Ed Chandler, Glen Rock. "Just like the weather."

Joy McFalls, 16, Gettysburg, Christy Kramer, 19, were "pressed" into service to help to sell over 3,600 gallons of cider in the first weekend of the festival. As with many of the other apple-product-selling stands, proceeds went to the community efforts of the Jaycees.

Another sweet apple-selling venue was Brittle Maker stand, which sold peanut brittle made with dried apples and cinnamon. Although the nearby Aspers-based business sold assorted varieties, the apple variety was certainly the most popular.

"We're sold out," said Charles Dunn, York, who worked at the stand on the first Sunday of the festival. "We had huge piles here and they're all gone."

Pennsylvania Apple Queen Lauren Hankey, Gettysburg, and alternate Heidi Fetters, Gardners spent time interacting with the public, handing out stickers, and helping at the pie auction which benefits the St. Jude's Children's Hospital. The auction was the culmination of a 14-pie contest.

The apple stands were interspersed between stand after stand of handcrafted work. Wreaths, painted gourds, dolls, furniture, yard signs, paper jewelry, candles, original paintings, potpourri, and children's toys are just a few of the varieties of crafts displayed and sold during the festival.

The harvest festival also featured a photography contest, besides a gallery of old-fashioned apple production equipment and apple harvest memorabilia.

Sponsored by Upper Adams Jaycees, the festival is held annually the first two weekends in October. A precursor to the harvest festival, an Apple Blossom Festival is held the first full weekend in May.

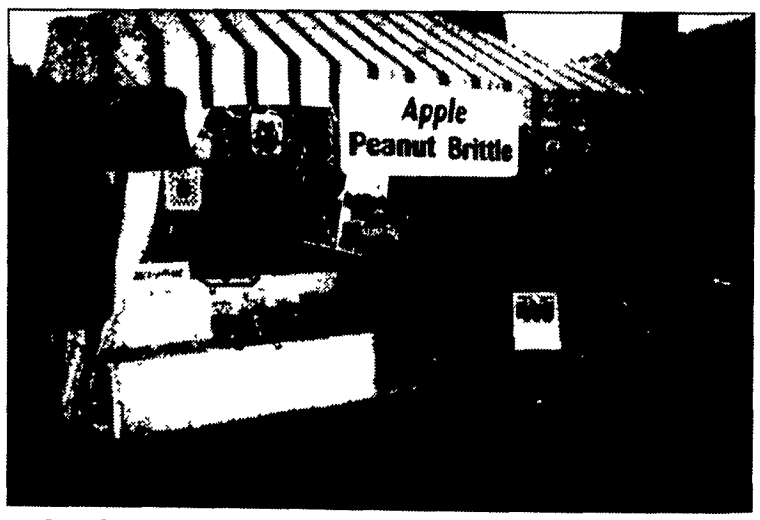
Adams County is traditionally a land of apples. Each year county producers harvest more than 5 million bushels of the fruit during the harvest that begins in July and ends in November. Cold storage adds 8-10 months to some of the prominent varieties.

Bethany Massara, Shippensburg, wards off the crisp air of autumn with hot apple cider, a popular choice for chilled festival-goers.

Volunteers make applesauce to sell for the Jaycees, aided by peeling and coring machines donated by nearby apple-processing factories.

At left, Mike Bohnert, York, helpd out at the busy make-your-own-scarecrow stand. Tracy and Michaella Francis, York, put Bohnert's assembly expertise to work as they created their own scarecrow.

Above, Pennsylvania Apple Queen Lauren Hankey, Gettysburg, is joined by alternate Heidi Fetters, Gardners. During the festival the apple representatives spent time interacting with the public, handing out stickers, and helping at the pie auction that benefits the St. Jude's Children's Hospital.



Another sweet apple-selling stand was a stand that sold peanut brittle made with dried apples and cinnamon. The apple variety was the most popular and sold out, according to Charles Dunn, York, who worked at

Vada Melhorn, Aspers, demonstrates the peeler and corer machine. The apples will be made into applesauce and sold at the stand, with proceeds going to the Jaycees. "I've helped 25 years," said Melhorn. "I really love it."

ANSWER — A reader wrote that she and many other seamstresses often have difficulty discerning the right and wrong sides of fabric. She wanted to know if the holes along the edge of the fabric are punched from the right or wrong side or if that varies and is not a clear indicator. An anonymous reader wrote that she was told the fabric on the bolt is folded with the right side inside for protection. If you buy fabric by the yard, it is usually easy to see which way the fabric was folded on the bolt.

It works best to raise earthworms in a 4x4x12-inch box in a basement or cool, moist place. Keep slightly damp. Feed nightly, stale bread spread lightly with peanut butter and lay spread side down on beds, about six pieces per bed.

Sixth Annual Fall Harvest Oct. 28

LAUREL, Del. — The sixth Fall Harvest at Pepperbox, east of here, will be conducted Saturday, Oct. 28.

Sponsored by the Delmarva Driving Club, the annual event showcases real horsepower doing fieldwork and other tasks.

The event opens at 10 a.m. and runs until 3 p.m., with a parade of horses and antique vehicles at 2:30 p.m. A large display of antique tractors, cars, and trucks, along with a variety of hit-and-miss engines and antique equipment, is expected.

Several craftmakers will be demonstrating their basketweaving, broommaking, spinning and weaving, wood carving, painting and sewing skills, and more. Horse (and mule) riding and handling skills will be on exhibit. Privately-owned carriages and horse-drawn equipment will be on view throughout the day.

The admission fee of $5 per vehicle entitles visitors to ride horse-drawn shuttles from the parking lot to the activity site and two tickets to all children's rides.

Special music in the morning will be provided by The Dove, a gospel quintet from Salisbury, Md., who have been performing their musical ministry for more than 25 years.

From 1:15 p.m. to 2 p.m. Delmarva's Legend, Bunky Eye, will be featured, recapturing some of his recorded hits. Bunky formed a band known as "The Inmates" in 1971. Playing locally and then moving up to the big-time, Bunky has appeared on stage with stars Jim Reeves, Mel Torme, Patti Page, Johnny Cash, Marty Robbins, and many others during his 40-year career in country and rock "n roll music. More recently, Bunky has performed on stage as a single.

Call 302-875-4971 for information, directions to the farm, or to reserve vendor or exhibit space.

Why Do Leaves Change Color

Summer's green leaves have been replaced by bright autumn colors like red, orange, gold, and brown. These color changes are caused by three things: leaf pigment, length of night, and the weather.

There are three types of pigments. The first, chlorophyll, gives leaves their green color. Chlorophyll is needed for photosynthesis-the process that helps plants use sunlight to make sugar for food.

Carotenoids, a second type of pigment, produce the yellow, orange, and brown colors in things like corn, carrots, and daffodils.

Anthocyanins give color to cranberries, red apples, blueberries, strawberries and more. Both chlorophyll and carotenoids are present in the leaf cells throughout the growing season. Anthocyanins are made in the autumn because of bright light and excess plant sugars in the leaf cells.

CAROLYN GILLES
Interim State Coordinator
Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program

In the bottom drawer of my husband's desk, there rests a large journal, affectionately referred to in our family as "The Red Book." It contains a father-son saga that has been ongoing for the last 20 years. The large 8x12-inch red "standard diary" was bought on impulse from a clearance rack of outdated books in an office supply store.

It has become a compendium of shared joys, sorrows, accomplishments, and outings. I have a life-long habit of journaling, but though we all are encouraged to contribute, this special book has evolved into the place where "the men in the family" record events, thoughts, and data. Here they log marriages, deaths, births, graduations, and even operations and an occasional argument. Some days never get a single entry. It seems that, over the last two decades, nothing of note has ever happened on at least five days out of each month. Dates that mark birthdays and holidays, however, overflow with words, as celebrations are listed, year-by-year, citing where they were held and who attended.

The mother-child relationship is sacred, but Penn State Family Specialist Dr. Daniel Perkins recently cited a literature review that clearly suggests that fathers contribute to their children's well being in unique ways. The father tends to promote intellectual development and social competence through physical play, while the mother tends to promote those same skills through verbal expression and teaching activities.

Higher levels of father involvement in activities with children, such as eating meals together, going on outings and helping with homework, are associated with fewer behavior problems, higher levels of sociability, and a high level of school performance.

Our sons, now 32 and 26, live in Alaska these days and visit home only once a year. In their absence, "The Red Book" is often opened and special memories shared as we flip through it's worn pages: the time I got the truck stuck in a muddy creek bed and had to get out, mud oozing over my shoes, to turn in the hubs for the 4-wheel drive; each boy's first hunting trip with dad; numerous camping trips; the time one son was so determined to pass his lifeguard swimming test that he exclaimed, "If I can't hold that brick out of the water, I'm going down with it!"

It's a virtual treasure chest.

A journal need not be restricted to prose. Clippings and souvenirs can be included. Pictures drawn or cut from magazines can be pasted on journal pages to help express anxiety about an impending move or anticipation about a family vacation.

The activity can be most revealing. Picture choices can precipitate father-daughter/son talks about the emotions that surface. The pictures can segue the exploration of what lies behind a particular choice. (It's also a good use for old magazines!) One young boy in a journaling class chose a picture of a cartoon figure laying on the ground, staring up to the sky, saying, "Why me?"

He also chose a picture of a tire, stating that he had been "tread on all day!" Clearly he had some issues that begged to be explored. He has learned to use his journal as a valuable coping tool.

In our family, my husband has lifted Olympic weights for more than 40 years. As our sons became teenagers, it became a "rite of manhood" to be allowed to work out at the gym with free weights, under Dad's watchful eye. Self-conscious young men began to grow in confidence, discipline, and self-esteem, as father and son celebrated "personal records," recorded them in "The Red Book" and worked on perfect form.

While in high school, our youngest son competed in Pennsylvania's Keystone Games, with dad as coach. Dad couldn't have been prouder, as he watched his protege received a Silver Medal around his neck. Now that was definitely one for "The Red Book."

Ohio Farm Science Review

LONDON, Ohio — Prospective exhibitors for next year's Farm Science Review have already been knocking on Craig Fendrick's door.

The manager of the Review says that speaks well for the event just concluded at the Molly Caren Agricultural Center near London, Ohio.

"Exhibitors left happy. Attendance was excellent. The field demonstrations ran very well," Fendrick said.

More than 142,000 people — 142,990 in all — were estimated to visit the Review this year, conducted Sept. 19-21. That compares well with the record established in 1997 at 145,454. Visitors saw equipment and supplies from 571 exhibitors, viewed field demonstrations, and attended educational sessions.

Fendrick credited his student work crew and staff for the success of the event. Chuck Gamble, assistant farm manager, said the upbeat attitude of exhibitors and farmers, in the midst of low farm prices, could partially be credited to good crops and the government's farm safety net.

The opening of the Natural Resources Interpretive Center stands out as a highlight of the event, Fendrick said. The $225,000 building — 3,100 square feet counting deck and porch — will serve as a learning laboratory for students of all ages.

Also at the Review, attendees volunteered their time and energy to make 268 polar fleece hats for homeless children. The event was organized by Bridgette Sloan and Mary Forster, consumer and textile sciences associates for Ohio State University Extension. They encouraged passers-by to sit down at one of five Singer sewing machines donated by Graceland Sewing Center in Columbus and follow step-by-step directions to make a hat. They surpassed their original goal of 250 hats.

The Farm Science Review is an annual event sponsored by Ohio State University's College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences. Next year's show will take place Sept. 18-20. For more information, see the Review's Website at http://www.ag.ohio-state.

One Look Was All It Took

"DMI made a big difference in my neighbor's corn the year before I could get on top of the grain bins and look across at his field and really see a difference, his corn was already jumping out when the ground was cold and wet That sold me on it"

Bruce Leverton
Woodbury Farms Enterprises, Queenstown, MD

Bruce Leverton farms around 2300 acres of grain, and with an operation that size he needed a tillage tool that would perform Unlike conventional tillage tools, The DMI ecolo-til 2500 aggressively twists and rolls the soil while laterally fracturing the hardpan This provides excellent fracture of compaction to increase water absorption and air exchange for better nutrient flow up and down the soil profile and root system The result? Warmer soil in the spring for earlier planting and more uniform crop germination

"Last summer I bought a 7 shank ecolo-til 2500 from Hoober and I've been impressed – I really like the job it does The tool is heavy enough, and it definitely helps with compaction,"says Bruce

And Hoober has the knowledge, service and parts support you need to make sure your DMI ecolo-till 2500 keeps going strong "When your dealer is as committed to the business as much as Hoober is, it really makes a difference,"says Bruce I am always able to get what I need, when I need it I'm really happy with what they have done for me "

The combination of DMI's ecolo-til 2500 and Hoober, Inc. will help you get more bushels out of your field and that means more money in your pocket!

The Earth Force company is a part of the SUPERSTAV group of companies that are Dutch and American owned. Earth Force is the undisputed world leader in compact backhoe loaders.

Earth Force backhoe loaders are the result of years of development and millions of dollars of investment in design, testing, manufacturing facilities, and quality systems utilizing the best components available in the world.

More and more people in industries like yours are discovering the value of these unique compact machines. Size does matter! These backhoe loaders can be transported easily behind a pickup truck on a trailer. Because of compact size and features like four wheel steering and side shift backhoes they are extremely maneuverable and able to access and dig in areas that full size machines wouldn't dream of. Performance, however, was not compromised as these machines have amazing digging depth and load carrying capacities for machines of their class.

We invite you to experience how these machines could make your work more efficient and profitable. Call now to arrange for a demonstration at your work site.

"I'm impressed with the heavy construction of the Roto Mix mixer and the accuracy of the electronic scale."
- Joe Kauffman, Mill Manager, G&G Feed, Manheim, PA

G&G Feed, a commerical feed mill, needed a way to mix rations better and faster. Some mixes were taking up to 2 hours!

In 1999 the company bought a 420-12 Roto Mix mixer from Lapp's Barn Equipment. Now those rations take only minutes. And according to mill manager Joe Kauffman, "a 1,000 lb. mix for calves gets mixed as well as a full load of 8,000 lbs. for a larger dairy."

G&G specializes in mixing custom dairy rations for dairies with 115 cows and more. They average 200 tons of custom mixes per week. Any given mix can consist of up to 15 different ingredients plus 100 lbs. of molasses per ton.

If you have any questions about how well the Roto Mix mixer can mix feed, call Joe at G&G Feed, Manheim, PA (717) 665-6122. A good time to call Joe is before 9:00 a.m.

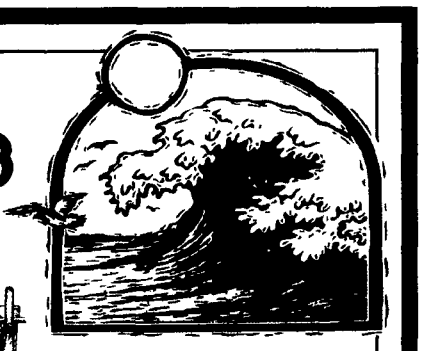
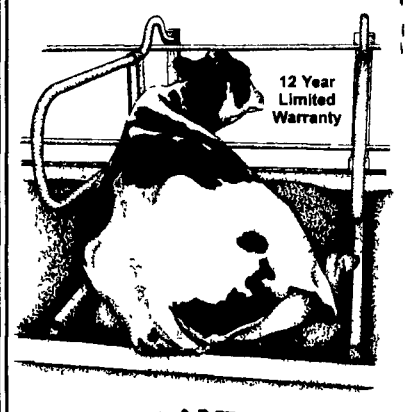
Waterbeds for Cows





ALANTA® — LimPoly

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 12-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

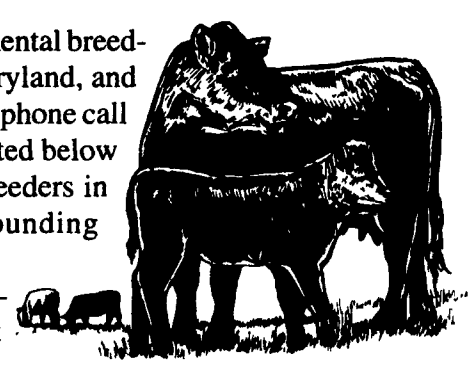
BEEF TIPS

Where can I get a Simmental for my youngster? (Part III)



There are over 100 Simmental breeders in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and surrounding states. A telephone call to the phone numbers listed below will result in a list of breeders in your county and surrounding area.

While Simmental breeders often sell their best breeding stock for thousands of dollars, each breeder knows the importance of youngsters showing Simmental beef cattle in shows. Ask them for the "youngster club calf discount" and ask the breeder if he has a suitable show calf at this time or a selection for the youngster to choose from.

Offering a new approach to horse keeping!!!

Are you tired of having your horses stand in wet stalls? Would you like to dry them out and save money on bedding at the same time? Are you tired of the mud holes your horses make outside the barn door or off the end of the concrete? Would you like a solid surface around your outside hay feeder that allows moisture to soak through to the ground below?

If this sounds good, give me a call and I will explain how it works and how much it costs.

Attention
Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!

New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP

This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40

An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributers of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.
